Study on Highrise Living for Elderly Reveals Loneliness, Isolation, Fear

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

"I would have given anything to have someone come in and make me a cup of tea."

This lonely statement comes from an elderly lady in a public housing unit who lay ill in her apartment for three weeks without a visitor, too afraid or too shy to ask for company.

Another 250 senior citizens, most of them with time on their hands, live in the same building. But because of the peculiar influence of the highrise apartment on its inhabitants, they don't get to know one another.

"I don't even know the people on this floor."

"I don't really bother with people in the building."

"Everyone stays pretty well to themselves."

These were some typical answers from inhabitants of the subsidized highrise for the elderly when asked what sort of community activities they participate in.

The city is Hamilton, Ont., where recently a study on highrise living was conducted, but it might be Victoria in a decade or two, when galloping land prices have wiped out low-density living for all but the affluent. Not the highrises that take up priceless waterfront or parkside land, containing lavish suites, shops, common rooms and other luxuries.

The highrises the elderly pensioners will be shuffled into, like those in Hamilton, will be the bare-bones minimum in decent habitation, unless architectural breakthroughs or financial windfalls intervene.

The first example has already reached Victoria. It towers above the corner of View and Quadra, a slab of limited-dividend concrete no brighter than the crumbling commercial structures below.

And first indications are that the elderly people, for which the apartment was built, are more than pleased with their new accommodation, with rents that don't exceed $127 for a one-bedroom suite.

But as the years roll on, will its inhabitants and others similar begin to react to their special environment as did the people in Hamilton?

Some experts answer a definite yes. The famous Vancouver architect, Arthur Erickson, has said that elevators in highrise apartments disorient people.

"To lose all contact with the ground creates an artificial situation, and people go through neuroses because of this disorientation . . . We really need a garden, too, some change from the apartment itself.

"It isn't good to come home to an artificial cell, never changing, with the same view, the same light. Even a small garden has a change of seasons, change of light, new patterns, the move from inside to outside."

The Hamilton study, conducted by an old age pensioner-student, named Morris Silbert under the surprising auspices of the federal Opportunities For Youth Fund, came to similar conclusions after interviews with 120 occupants of apartments in the city's publicly-aided housing for the elderly.

The woman who had no one to bring her a cup of tea, the woman who was dead four days before she was found — these are possibly extreme examples of what the lonely corridors of apartment blocks can do.

The significant findings of Silbert's study were the indications that as time wears on in a highrise apartment filled

Two Views On Apartments For Aged

By ANN DUNSMUIR
Times Staff

Anyone willing to give up pets, parties, gardens and heavy antique furniture will probably like living in a highrise apartment.

Most tenants feel amenities like heated pools, saunas and hydro-therapy baths make up for restrictions on personal freedom.

Mrs. Edith Hilliker, 67, lives alone on the 21st floor of a Michigan Street highrise. She chose her present home because of the view and the outdoor, heated pool.

Mrs. Hilliker is asthmatic and has to choose her living quarters to ameliorate her condition. She loves to swim but has to use an outdoor pool. Indoors, the chlorine fumes bring on an attack of asthma.

She finds highrise living helps keep her free from asthmatic symptoms because she is above any air pollution.

"Some mornings I look down and can't see anything. The whole downtown area will be socked in by smoke from that awful thing in the Gorge," she said.

"The people who say there is no air pollution in Victoria should come up on the roof here some morning when there has been no wind. You can't see a thing. There's no excuse for it in a city like Victoria," Mrs. Hilliker said.

She doesn't find apartment living lonely.

Mrs. Hilliker has made several good friends in the building since she moved in less than a year ago.

"We have a lot of fun together," she said. "I wouldn't go back to a house. If something goes wrong, I pick up the phone and call the manager — it's his worry not mine."

Mrs. Hilliker is glad to be rid of the worry and work involved in owning a house.

"At my age I don't want to wash windows and look after a garden. I like to be free to come and go. With an apartment you can lock the door and leave on a trip without worrying about details like lawns or vandals."

House of Anne Frank Has Financial Problems

AMSTERDAM (AP) — The memory of Anne Frank still flourishes, but the house that sheltered her from the Nazis is battling financial difficulties.

A severe monetary crisis led last year to talk of closing down Anne's refuge in the Second World War.

There was more talk of closure this spring, but now there are hopes that No. 263 Prinsengracht will overcome its money problems and continue as a mute symbol of reproach for the Nazi extermination of six million Jews.

With courage, gaiety and idealism beyond her years, the Jewish girl, hardly into her teens, recorded the life of the house in a diary discovered after she and the other inmates were betrayed Aug. 4, 1944.

They were sent to concentration camps in cattle trucks on the day the Allies liberated Brussels. Of the eight Jews taken from the house only Otto Frank, the father, survived the war. Anne died in Belsen.

Visitors Increase

The house was opened in 1960 as a museum and public memorial. The annual stream of international visitors has steadily increased.

The house gets about two-thirds of its income from voluntary support, and it posted a $5,000 deficit in 1970.

A foundation maintains the house, provides the staff and operates some 40 annual seminars on such themes as oppression, intolerance and racial prejudice. It faces the delicate question of raising funds without appearing to seek too much.

"We don't want to exploit the memory of Anne," says Hans van Houte, the foundation's 48-year-old director, "but we do have to make provision for the future."

Every year the house with all its activities needs about 300,000 guilders or $83,000 to operate. More than half goes to the seminars, which also receive a 60-per-cent government subsidy. The foundation must try to cover the balance through annual pledges, donations from visitors, bookshop sales and nominal attendance fees for the seminars.

This year, the house decided to experiment with admission charges.

Ambulance Delay Attacked

Investigations are being conducted at police, city and provincial levels into an ambulance-call conflict in connection with a stabbing death on the Victoria-Saanich border Friday.

Donald Lynn Williams, 26, died after he was stabbed in his rooming house at 840 Tolmie.

CALLED OFF

Saanich police have been criticized for calling off a Victoria city ambulance which was in sight of the death scene. Police records show Saanich officers were called to the house, then telephoned for a Saanich fire department ambulance, rejecting the Victoria vehicle.

A Saanich police spokesman said the matter was being looked into, and agreed the boundary between the cities is a "grey area" where police, fire and ambulance calls are concerned.

"We have to admit that in some cases it could be the difference between life and death," the spokesman said. "In this particular case, we understand the wound was of such a nature that it wouldn't have mattered if the man had been stabbed on the operating table. There was no chance of survival."

'NO GREY AREA'

Victoria Police Chief Jack Gregory denied there was a grey area in coverage between the two cities.

"It was a matter of seconds in this case . . . the two ambulances must have been in sight of each other," Gregory said.

"No matter how it turns out the public is being well served."

A spokesman for Garden City Ambulance, which has the emergency service contract with Victoria, said there was "nothing to say" on the matter from the firms point of view.

He declined comment on a suggestion that the firm had started the call conflict because Garden City would not be paid for their aborted run to the Tolmie address because it was not a "completed" call.

PROBE PLEDGE

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock, visiting ailing Ald. Robert Baird in Seattle, said he would launch an investigation into the dispute when he returned.

Attorney-General Les Peterson and Provincial Secretary Wes Black also said they had asked for details of the event.

Ministers' Impeachment Order Filed

Special to The Times

OTTAWA — A notice of motion calling for the impeachment of three government ministers was filed in the house of Commons today.

The notice was given by the Progressive Conservative member for Peace River, Ged Baldwin, on the trounds that Fiance Minister Edgar Benson, Justice Minister John Turner and Minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board Otto Lang have violated their oaths of office by "conspiring to withhold over $90 million from western wheat farmers."

The motion will be considered Thursday.

The motion calls for appointment of a special committee of five members to enquire into the ministers' refusal to pay money owed to Canadian wheat farmers under Temporary Wheat Reserves Act of 1966.

The failure of the government to pay the $90 million has been the subject of heated debate and many motions in the Commons since Parliament returned Sept 7 and even before adjournment for the summer last June 28.

Seven-Day Ultimatum Ignored by IBEW

Electrical workers employed by B.C. Hydro have ignored a seven-day ultimatum to agree to an arbitrator for their long-running dispute, but there was no indication today whether the Crown corporation would take court action to have an arbitrator appointed.

The notice served on Local 258 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers under terms of the Arbitration Act expired at noon Tuesday, but Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum said Tuesday night the union had until noon today to make up its mind.

The choice is to agree to a mutually satisfactory arbitrator or be taken to court and have a judge appointed.

'NOT VALID'

In a telephone interview from Vancouver shortly before the noon deadline today, union business agent Doug Cronk said the IBEW had ignored the ultimatum which it regards as "not a valid procedure."

He added: "We are waiting now for the authority to say what they are going to do in this regard. We really have no idea what they are going to do."

Meanwhile, Shrum was giving away no hint as to whether Hydro would carry out its threat to seek a court-appointed judge as arbitrator.

Asked if this action was planned he replied: "I can't say. There is no comment on that."

French-Speaking Students Block Ontario School

STURGEON FALLS, Ont. (CP)—A sit-in by about 250 French-speaking students and parents continued at Sturgeon Falls secondary school as classes began today.

The demonstrators confined their sit-in Tuesday night to the school cafeteria as police had asked. But today, some students blocked the main hallway.

Sturgeon Falls police escorted teachers past the demonstrators and into the building, but some teachers gave up trying to enter and went home.

A meeting was to be held in Toronto later today between Education Minister Robert Welch, officials of the Nippissing board of education and student leader Jean St. Louis.

French-speaking students in this predominantly French-speaking community of 7,000 have been on strike since Sept. 7 to back demands for separate schools for French and English-speaking students. See earlier story on Page 39.

ALDERMAN IRATE OVER 'DANCING GIRL'

A sketch of a scantily-clad dancing girl, intended to introduce a certain note of enticing warmth into the, uh, festivities at the B.C. Municipalities Convention here has caused only cold shoulders so far.

Ald. George McKnight, a serious-minded delegate from Port Alberni, took an indignant look at the sketch and said: "I'm not interested in seeing a dancing girl in Victoria."

The offending sketch, with accompanying message, came from the Victoria Committee responsible for entertainment of delegates to the conference.

The message: "It is not expected that the little girl on the side of this building will be at the business sessions but you may be fortunate enough to meet her at one of our social events."

That, retorted McKnight, gave the heinous impression that the convention is "nothing but a big party."

He for one wanted it known that "more serious business," and not monkey business either, faces the convention.

Victoria Ald. Ove Witt, vice-chairman of the convention committee, said the bulletin was meant to add some "light humor" to the city's reception invitations.

Anyway, he added, it only referred to one social event. He did not elaborate on which one and other delegates were discreetly silent as well.

Air Price War Near As Agreement Fails

GENEVA (CP) — International control over fares major airlines charge for transatlantic flights will end Feb. 1, the International Air Transport Association announced today.

Lufthansa, the West German airline, immediately announced that it will offer cheaper fares than all other scheduled airlines for the run.

Air Canada said in Montreal it will "remain fully competitive" with the transatlantic air fares offered by any other airline.

Announcement of the end of controls came after the major airlines failed to agree on new standard rates applicable to all lines flying the North Atlantic route.

The German airline said its excursion fares would be lower than those offered by other scheduled airlines.

Lufthansa said its basic excursion fare would be $215.10 off-season from Frankfurt to New York and $276.50 in the high season.

Other members of the International Air Transport Association have agreed to a return excursion fare of $230 off-season and $280 in the high season from Frankfurt to New York.

CURTIS BLASTS VICTORIA ALDERMEN

'Mercenary Attitude' Attacked

Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich today attacked what he called "a mercenary attitude" on the part of Victoria aldermen who Tuesday opposed turning Thetis Lake Park into a permanent natural playground.

Members of city council's B committee stated they want to preserve their options, which include selling the park to the regional government and subdividing the 40 acres that lie south of the Island highway.

Speaking as chairman of the capital district regional board, Curtis said: "If this is interpreted as interference into the affairs of Victoria, then I'm sorry."

"But the point has to be made that the Greater Victoria area needs more parkland, not less, and it seems an unfortunate contradiction, at a time when the regional district, Saanich and other municipalities are buying parkland and open space that the city even gives the slightest consideration of reducing its park acreage at Thetis," Curtis said.

"I'm saddened by the apparent mercenary attitude in the city. Parkland does not belong on a balance sheet. It is an asset that should not be preceded by a dollar sign."

Curtis pointed out that the regional district has acquired almost 3,000 acres of parkland in the past five years.

Nuclear Test Going Ahead

HE'LL QUIT IF AID CUT

SAIGON (Reuters) — President guyen Van Thieu said today he will resign if U.S. aid is cut off over his decision to run alone for re-election Oct. 3.

The possibility of aid being cut off as a demonstration of Washington's misgivings over the non-contested vote is slight, diplomatic sources in Saigon said.

Rough Year Ahead, UBCM Told

B.C. municipalities are in for a rough year of labor negotiations in 1972, the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention was told here today.

UBCM executive director Theo Adams said at the convention's opening session there is "sufficient unrest" amongst municipal employees in the province "to portend the shape of things to come."

Adams said almost 100 municipal work agreements are open for negotiation next year and the economic problems of the country have not prevented employees from seeking wage and salary increases.

The convention was also told B.C.'s municipal finances are being "strained in a grim and rather frightening manner."

FAST GROWING

UBCM president Henry Anderson, mayor of Richmond, said the union's financial analysis released last spring showed what municipal officials have "known for some time."

Earlier, provincial minister without portfolio Grace McCarthy disagreed with Anderson, saying B.C.'s local governments were more stable and faster growing than any others in Canada.

Mrs. McCarthy also called on municipalities to set up their own committees to fight drug abuse, saying provincial financial help cannot do the job alone, but must have active support at the community level.

Adams told the convention the 1971 negotiations were less hectic than 1970's, and the settlements have averaged increases of 8.2 per cent this year compared to 8.3 per cent last year.

However, many settlements are not completed and the final figures may change "noticeably when full details are available."

Adams said "one disturbing aspect" of negotiations this year has been a rising number of rejections by union membership of their negotiators' recommendations. This has placed a "great strain" on the system of collective bargaining, he said.

Anderson recalled that the provincial government had backed out of an agreement to participate in the UBCM's financial analysis, known as the Plunkett report, threatening to make the study "an exercise in futility."

The study showed costs of services like education and welfare have been rising at a rate that causes other services to suffer, while municipalities receive provincial grants insufficient to soften the blow.

No Order to Halt On Amchitka, Says AEC

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP)—The Atomic Energy Commission says preparations for an underground five-megaton nuclear test on Amchitka Island are proceeding on schedule, despite strong opposition and speculation President Nixon may cancel it.

David G. Jackson, deputy director of the AEC office of public affairs, said the 5,875-foot shaft has been drilled and workers are "on schedule and making the final preparations for the test."

No specific date has been set, but Jackson said it still is "tentatively scheduled for early October."

The Senate and House of Representatives in Washington agreed Tuesday on a provision in a public works appropriation bill that would forbid detonation of the device, code-named Cannikin, before May 31, 1972, without Nixon's direct approval.

But Jackson says "that's the way it is on any major test, particularly off the Nevada test site—that's the usual procedure, that the president has to give his approval."

The site of what would be the largest underground blast ever detonated in North America is a barren island halfway between Anchorage and Tokyo at the confluence of the Bering Sea and Pacific Ocean.

Some observers feel that President Nixon may cancel the blast when he meets Japanese Emperor Hirohito in Alaska on Sept. 25. Such a move would be taken throughout the Pacific as an act of goodwill.

Meanwhile the Don't Make A Wave Committee in Vancouver today sent off its protest ship the Greenpeace on which 12 people will cruise just off the coast of Amchitka on the day of the scheduled blast. See page 34.

Hostages Not Shot By Prisoners

Times News Services

ATTICA, N.Y. — State Corrections Commissioner Russell Oswald today confirmed that gunshots killed nine hostages but was not certain how it happened.

But he also confirmed no guns of any kind were found among the prisoners after troops used gunfire to halt a four-day uprising of rebellious convicts.

Gov. Nelson Rockefeller today ordered a full investigation.

Conference Postponed

The governor said he will fly to the capitol in Albany Thursday to confer with legislative leaders on the Attica situation.

In a statement to reporters late Tuesday, Oswald said one question was how any of the hostages could have been killed by gunfire.

"The most important and obvious answer is the fact that the inmates had dressed all hostages in prison garb to ensure difficulty of identification between inmate and hostage," he said.

"Additionally, hostages could very well have been used as shields or forced forward into gunfire to suggest that they were not hostages and could have been mistaken for such because of their prison garb."

He released a list of weapons found in the prison after the rebellious convicts were routed. The list included gasoline bombs, sharpened spears, metal pipes, straight razors and spiked baseball bats—but no guns.

He declined to answer questions from reporters.

No Throats Cut

The commissioner's statement came several hours after disclosure by Dr. John F. Edland, Monroe County medical examiner, that the hostages all died of gunshot wounds and that none had had his throat slashed.

"There were no cut throats or any kind of mutilation," Dr. Edland said after examining eight bodies of hostages. "All eight cases died of gunshot wounds."

A ninth hostage killed during the assault had previously been established as a gunshot victim.

Oswald maintained that "there have been two misstatements of facts" concerning what happened to the hostages. He said the first was that all the hostages had cut throats and the second was that none had a slashed throat.

During the evacuation of the dead and wounded after the assault, Oswald said, "a number of those evacuated had slashed throats. . . ."

He offered no further elaboration and did not mention any source of information other than the report of the forensic pathologist, a reference to Dr. Edland.

Heat of Situation

Oswald said one reason for the erroneous reports about throats being slit was that several corrections officers "positively stated that they had seen hostages dropping as their throats were apparently being cut."

He added that there was confusion when 30 other hostages were evacuated and that those involved reported in the heat of the situation things that might have been erroneous.

VICTORIA'S DAILY NEWSPAPERS

Eagles Threatened By Insecticides

Biologists today expressed fears that insecticides may be the cause of the extremely low reproductive rate of bald eagles on the San Juan Islands.

At the same time they expressed deep concern at the heavy mercury and DDT residues found in birds this summer in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Charles Nash, an expert on predatory birds at Friday Harbor, said there were only two confirmed hatchings of chicks from 23 bald eagle nests surveyed this spring.

This would indicate a low reproductive rate throughout the Gulf Islands and South Vancouver Island, he said.

He didn't know the cause for the poor hatchings.

"No study was conducted," he said. "It might have been due to our harsh late spring or soft eggshells."

(DDT in species of predatory birds interferes with their calcium metabolism in such a way that the eggshell becomes too thin to perform its function.)

David Stirling, a Victoria bird expert, said the low reproductive rate may signal the start of the decline of the predatory bird population in this area.

"DDT residue have been found in birds in this area," he said. "It evidently comes from the Fraser Valley."

Meanwhile, Rory Finnegan, B.C. Fish and Wildlife biologist, says he is deeply concerned with mercury and DDT contamination in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Mercury residues three parts per millions were found in pigeons, guillemots and auklets — two sea birds, he said.

"Pigs have died from that amount of residue in their livers," he said.

While there is no evidence yet of the fish-eating birds dying from mercury poisoning, he sadi, it would no doubt have its effect in time.

"Some birds are also carrying a heavy burden of DDT — up to 80 and 90 parts per millions," he added.

Finnegan helives the mercury and DDT are swept into Queen Charlotte waters by oceanic currents.

"The chemical and insecticide originate from outside British Columbia," he stated.

He was critical of the World Health Organization for not banning DDT and still supporting its use for the control of malaria.

"They could control mosquitoes by another means," he said. "In five years WHO will have to change its tune."

Kirkby Back In Hot Water

Uvic philosophy professor Ronald Kirkby has clashed with the university administration over how he want to teach some courses and there are indications it may cost him his job.

Kirkby, 33, who caused a stir on campus last October by speaking in support of the FLQ during the crisis in Quebec, apparently wants to blend three philosophy courses into a "learning experience" and to include workshops in the Gestalt process.

His plan has been rejected and he has been advisd that if he does not follow his department's decisions, steps will be initiated to remove him from the faculty.

Kirkby was in Vancouver today and could not be reached for comment. But he indicated Tuesday he intends going ahead with his proposal.

He said he expects there will be a public meeting Monday when the philosophy department will present its views on the subject.

Space Probes

GENEVA (UPI) — The United States today announced plans to send nuclear-powered space probes to the outer planets during the next five years, followed by manned rockets with atomic engines in the 1980s. The first mission using a nuclear reactor to provide on-board electricity needs will be sent to Jupiter in 1972.

. . . HOSTAGES

Oswald said a preliminary inspection of the bodies prior to any autopsies showed slashes on necks, puncture wounds, apparent broken arms, battered faces and abrasions.

Dr. Edland said his medical examination found abrasions and other evidence of beatings on some bodies of hostages. But he said only one hostage was cut on the neck, and that wound was a small hole in the back of the neck.

The medical examiner said: "There were two types of missiles found in both the inmates and the hostages. Some were buckshot. Some were larger-calibre missiles."

No Zip Gun Wounds

State police who charged the prison carried shotguns and rifles.

Asked if any of the gunshot wounds could have been inflicted by "zip" guns—homemade weapons—Dr. Edland said he was familiar with "zip" gun wounds and that he found no such wounds.

The rebellion erupted last Thursday and the prisoners took 38 guards and prison employees as hostages. One guard died Saturday of injuries suffered in the first surge of violence.

The rebels were crushed Monday when heavily-armed state police, guards, sheriff's deputies and National Guard troops moved into the prison under a cloud of tear gas.

After the assault, 40 bodies were found. The dead included 31 prisoners and nine hostages. Several prisoners could not be accounted for and prison officials suggested they might have been killed and buried.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller in a statement Monday, spoke of prisoners having "carried out cold-blooded killings they had threatened from the start."

Prisoners Transferred

In other developments related to the uprising and the decision to storm the prison:

—A federal judge in Buffalo vacated an earlier order that had authorized a group of lawyers, doctors and nurses to enter the prison. State corrections officials successfully fought the order on the grounds that there was still a "state of emergency" at Attica.

—Prison officials said about 150 Attica prisoners have been transferred to two other state prisons Tuesday and additional transfers were expected. About 1,200 convicts were said to be housed temporarily in a cell block designed for 481 prisoners at Attica.

—State Assemblyman Arthur O. Eve of Buffalo said that prison rioters refused to kill hostages even when police moved in on the convicts. Eve, a black, maintained in a speech that "those were non-violent men in there."

Group of 10 Meets Today

Times News Services

LONDON — The ten leading Western industrial nations began a two-day conference today in which they are expected to put pressure on the U.S. to remove its new import surcharge and devalue the dollar.

Today's meeting of the industrial nations—known as the Group of 10—was called by Finance Minister Edgar Benson of Canada to seek a way out of the global monetary and trade crisis which followed Nixon's decision last month to impose the tax and cut the U.S. dollar's tie to gold.

Canada already has unsuccessfully sought exemption from the import tax, which affects about one-quarter of all Canadian sales to the U.S. This amounts to about $2.7 billion out of $11 billion a year.

BENSON IS CHAIRMAN

Benson is chairman this year of the Group of 10 and along with Louis Rasminsky, governor of the Bank of Canada, represents Canada here. The Canadian delegates are not expected to take any stand on the question of a suggested devaluation of the U.S. dollar.

The Nixon administration has resisted pressure to devalue the U.S. dollar but sources said a compromise agreement between the U.S. and its major trading partners still is possible. Treasury Secretary John B. Connally is representing the U.S. at the meeting.

Britain added its support Tuesday to a call by the six-country Common Market for devaluation of the dollar.

The Common Market countries are committed to seeking both an end to the import duty and a dollar devaluation as part of a general realignment of the world's leading currencies.

The U.S. has countered the demand for devaluation of the dollar with a move to have other major currencies revalued upwards.

Two Killed

SQUAMISH (CP) — James Michael Carroll, 24, of Burnaby, and Rudolph Thompson Henderson, 30, of Vancouver, were killed Tuesday when their pickup truck left the highway about 60 miles north of Vancouver and plunged into a creek.

'Dramatic' Hike In Tourist Field

Latest available figures on private investment in tourism are given by the B.C. government to show a "dramatic increase" in tourist industry development.

Tourist revenue for B.C. last year was estimated at $473.5 million compared with $100.4 million in 1960, according to the government travel bureau as reported to the department of industrial development, trade and commerce.

The department notes rapid growth in other Canadian provinces reporting on tourist industry development, but concludes B.C.'s position remains strong and of increasing importance.

Construction related to the tourist industry in 1969 shows B.C. responsible for nearly one-quarter of all such projects in Canada.

POTENTIAL

"Investment in facilities related directly to the travel industry gives some insight to the potential which private investors foresee for our province," the trade department said.

In the area of new hotels, clubs, restaurants, cafeterias and tourist cabins, total value in 1969 was $18.2 million in B.C. and $77.6 million in Canada as a whole, or 23.5 per cent for B.C. In 1960 the ratio was 16.4 per cent.

New garages and service stations accounted for $20.87 million value in 1969 in B.C. and $97 million in Canada, or 21.5 per cent for B.C. compared with 8 per cent in 1960.

RATE OF INCREASE

In this period the rate of increase in the first category was 129.8 per cent for B.C., 60.2 per cent for Canada, and in the second category, 374.6 per cent for B.C., 76 per cent for Canada.

Figures for gasoline sales, comparing 1960 and 1969, also reflect growth of travel by automobile, particularly during the tourist months of July, August and September.

In B.C. consumption in the nine years for the three-month period rose from 79.47 million gallons to 161 million gallons, up 102.7 per cent compared with a 61.1 per cent rise for Canada. The B.C. share in 1969 was 11 per cent compared with 8.8 per cent in 1960.

In the same period, B.C.'s annual gasoline sales rose by only 84.3 per cent, although B.C. as a percentage of total volume sold in Canada rose in 1969 to 10.2 compared with 9.2 in 1960.

The department concludes that there is likely greater auto travel in the summer both by residents and non-residents of the province.

Non-resident vehicles entering B.C. in the summer months in 1969 totalled 439,000 or 8.6 per cent of the Canadian total. This was 138.6 per cent higher than the total for B.C. in 1960.

Flag-Like Banner Ad Still Flying

A flag-like banner advertising "The Prince Albert Collection of Miniatures" on Humboldt was still up today in spite of threatened legal action by Victoria city hall.

Council's B Committee on Tuesday ordered the sign removed "forthwith" from a position in front of Lino-Rite Enterprises' shop in The Empress because the owners lack necessary permits.

Operator George Devlin was unavailable for comment this morning but an employee at a government liquor store across the street said the banner has not been taken down.

Aldermen heard Tuesday that lawyers for the firm have said the sign would no more be in contravention of the city's bylaw than the city's flags in Centennial Square.

The sign has been in place several months without a permit, but a permit was applied for last week which the city turned down.

French Taught

REGINA (CP) — A degree program in education with half the total class time taught in French has been instituted at Regina campus of University of Saskatchewan.

Called a bilingual bachelor of education, the degree requires the student to take at least 40 per cent and not more than 60 per cent of the course in French-taught classes.

About 50 students are expected to enrol in the program this year. Such classes as history, philosophy, psychology and theory will be taught entirely in French.

Projectionists Fear Crackdown

A British Columbia Projectionists' Union official said today their threat not to show restricted movies after Oct. 8 is based on fears of a police crackdown on Vancouver theatres.

Announcement of the Union's decision came Tuesday when it was revealed the projectionists had sent letters to some 70 theatres in B.C. informing managers the union does not want its members prosecuted for possible violations of the criminal code.

WASSERMAN

In a telephone interview from Vancouver, the union official admitted the move was based on a column by Vancouver Sun Columnist Jack Wasserman Sept. 4.

Wasserman ran an interview with Vancouver city prosecutor Stewart McMorran quoting him as saying there is nothing stopping police from laying obscenity charges against movies which have been approved by B.C. motion picture censor Ray McDonald.

McMorran said Tuesday he has considered approving raids on theatres but hasn't yet decided what to do. The union official said projectionists' representatives will meet McMorran early next week.

The official said the union sought legal advice from the provincial attorney-genera;'s department and was told that provincial attorney-general's provisions of the provincial Motion Pictures Act.

Yevtushenko To Visit U.S. in 1972

WASHINGTON (WP) — Soviet authorities have agreed to permit the poet Yevgeny Yevtushenko to visit the United States, it has been learned here.

Soviet officials confirmed that the controversial poet would visit the United States as a guest of Doubleday Co., Yevtushenko's American publisher.

The visit had been originally scheduled for October, when a new book of Yevtushenko's poems, titled Stolen Apples, will be published by Doubleday. A spokesman for Doubleday said the trip was postponed for unspecified reasons until January.

Yevtushenko, whose trips to the United States in 1963 and 1966 made him popular with college audiences, is a representative of the Soviet liberal intelligentsia.

His foreign travel was restricted after he criticized the 1968 Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia and opposed the expulsion of Nobel Prize-winning novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn from the Soviet Writers' Union in 1969.

Road Marking Shares Blame

Minor blame to "vague markings on the highway" was attributed by a coroner's inquest Tuesday night in the Aug. 26 death of motorist William Woodland Curry of Orangeville, Ont., on the Pat Bay Highway.

Curry, 22, was killed in a two-car collision while he was en route to the Swartz Bay ferry terminal. Driver of the other car, Richard Lee Rude, 40, of Alaska, was unhurt.

Major blame for the collision was fixed by the inquest on the dead driver.

SAN FRANCISCO — Scruples about standing around naked nearly got Mark Jacobs drafted. At his draft inspection he refused to take his pants off because he had neglected to wear underwear that day and didn't want to stand around naked and so was drafted. The judge reversed Jacobs' draft order.

BOURASSA SAYS QUEBEC CALLS TUNE

Constitutional Solution Seen

MONTREAL (CP)—Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa says his province will attempt to settle the matter of jurisdiction in the field of social security with the federal government before calling for another federal-provincial conference on the constitution.

In an interview published today in Le Devoir, Mr. Bourassa says he will try to resolve welfare matters one by one with the federal government.

When the two sides can reach an agreement that will satisfy Quebec's objectives and federal standards, it will be easier to settle the constitutional question, he said.

"I feel that we can find a formula which will respect our desire for autonomy in important fields, and their desire to maintain national standards."

Mr. Bourassa said he would like to speed up negotiations with the Trudeau government, but cautioned that he did not want to bind himself to a "constitutional calendar."

"If we were to renew constitutional talks right away, without seeing first to what extent we can agree in practice, I think that we would risk hitting another impasse."

The questions to be settled with the federal government include family allowance, unemployment insurance, manpower centres and manpower retraining. Further constitutional talks would depend on agreements being reached

"I want to make it quite clear that it will be the Quebec government which will decide on the resumption of constitutional discussions. It is not a matter of blackmail or of imposing our views, but it is up to Quebec to decide if conditions are right for a resumption of the talks.

Mr. Bourassa wrote to the prime minister suggesting changes in the administration of federal social security that would give Quebec more say over who receives benefits and the amounts of the benefits. Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday night that his government is examining the Quebec proposals "with interest."

Church Attacked

PERTH, Australia (Reuter) — A home-made incendiary bomb was thrown into St. George's Anglican Cathedral here during Evensong Sunday night. None of the congregation of about 50 was injured. Police said leaflets thrown with the bomb denounced the Anglican dean of Perth, Very Rev. John Hazelwood, who is known for his liberal views and encourages "rock" services.

Foggy in the Park

THE FALSITY OF ALDERMAN Frampton's position on Thetis Lake Park is obvious in the reported quotations of his remarks yesterday. He is against dedicating the property as parkland because he says this would prevent its sale to the Capital Regional District. He says there "is no way I want it as anything but a park." But he also says that at some time it could be advisable "maybe" to sell the southern 40-acre portion of the park for subdivision. Mr. Frampton is posing as a supporter of the park concept while at the same time indicating that he could be its worst enemy.

Former Parks superintendent Herbert Warren says that Mr. Frampton is aware that the 40-acre area lying south of the Trans-Canada Highway has been mentioned as an admirable tie-in with government-owned lands nearby, to form an extended green belt. Apart from Alderman Savage, a strong advocate of dedication of the whole property as a park, thus safeguarding it from subdivision, sale or other destruction, some aldermen of B Committee are waffling around the question and it is becoming obvious that the public interest in the parkland is not very safe in their hands.

The statement of Mr. O'Grady, city solicitor, that "it has no value whatsoever once it is dedicated" is correct from a legal and accounting standpoint, since it then is not subject to sale. But the real value of the land, as distinct from the dollar-value assigned to it by potential purchasers, would become greater once it was dedicated; for its use as a park would be guaranteed in perpetuity. The real value of this botanical treasure house and priceless recreation ground lies in its use to the public, and that use can only be greater as the property is removed from danger.

It would be a disgrace if aldermen, especially at this late point in their term of office, were to sell off any part of this public asset. Will any present member of Council or any other candidate have the courage to go before the public and ask for election so that he can sell some of Thetis Lake Park? The public's answer would be clear. If any alderman has not the courage of his convictions on this point, then he can have no excuse for even considering a reduction in the park area. He can have no excuse for not safeguarding the park.

The obvious procedure is to turn the whole property over to the region for dedication as a perpetual park. The city will lose some figures in a book; Victorians, and everyone else in the region, will continue to enjoy their present use of the area; the cost of maintenance will be taken over by the region as it clearly should be, and subdividers can look elsewhere than in a park for suitable property for housing.

Already many Victorians are beginning to look around for candidates for next year's council. There is a growing dissatisfaction with the foggy thinking that has marked many important civic issues in the past few months.

Spreading It Around

THE GRADUATED INCOME tax is logically being supplemented by a graduated benefit program which favors families with more children and a lower income. Mr. John Munro, Minister of National Health and Welfare, says: "We're asking people at high-income levels to give up their benefits and we're asking taxpayers generally to increase their contributions to help those on low incomes."

A sliding scale of benefits will apply according to the number of children and the total family income. For example, if total income reaches $10,500 and there is only one child, the bonus is lost; the floor for two children is $11,000. Benefits according to the age of the child have also been increased. Those families which make $5,500 or less and have three children would be eligible for maximum grants; families making $11,500 or more with three children would not be eligible for any family allowances.

Graduated benefits favoring only families with comparatively low incomes will come in for criticism. The middle-income group may see itself as the milch cow for politics. However, the effort to attain a more even distribution of wealth is now a part of our times. The debatable aspect today is concerned more with method than principle.

A fundamental problem still remains to be solved: how to overcome the human disposition to accept more and more from society and contribute less and less. Built-in income maintenance programs, while helping to remedy many obvious ills of society, do not by their nature stimulate recipients to work their way off the list. This is a human conflict which social planners must ultimately solve.

It should be noted, too, that a policy of increasing benefits according to the number of children in the family is at odds with the current trend to discourage large families.

With the new disposition to consider income as either positive or negative, with low incomes being brought up to a minimum floor, the stigma of a means test can be lost in the universal system of income tax returns. Peripheral programs such as family allowance grants and other patchwork devices should be considered as interim plans, to be absorbed eventually in a general guaranteed income system. But the human effects and repercussions of these new departures should also be kept under study. Merely dishing out money is not a social program. Providing training and employment as a means toward self-sufficiency is in many cases the only lasting remedy.

Oil on the Waves

A LARGE NUMBER OF THE winged victims of the oil spill caused by a collision of two ships last January near Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco have been nursed back to health and the last of them have been released. The story of dedication which brought so many people to the rescue of the sea gulls, mergansers, murres and scoters is a bright spot amid the environmental gloom.

The building in which the birds were housed had a lighting system to simulate night and day; there were stereo recordings of surf to make the birds feel at home; and, finally, there were swimming lessons for them in plastic swimming pools.

The oil slick had caused these creatures to lose the water-repellent feature of their feathers and they sank when placed in water. Teaching them to swim again took time. Even more than comforting physical surroundings was the need for love and care — for birds are easily frightened and, in the case of the oil spill, too much adrenalin was pumped into the systems of some birds and they died.

The birds were not the only beneficiaries of this fine display of human concern. We all learned something about the healing power of love and intelligent human care. It could mark the beginning of a wider, positive attitude towards the living things which share our planet.

". . . I've never met a problem I couldn't solve . . ."

VERDICT IN RETROSPECT — By HARRY SCHWARTZ

A New Ghost for the Kremlin Attic?

WILL Nikita Khrushchev's ghost haunt the Kremlin in the years ahead?

The present Soviet rulers appear to fear it may. That trepidation seems the most likely explanation for the orchestrated silence the Soviet press and radio maintained about his death for most of last weekend. Only after the cables had reported the enormous and sorrowful reaction to Khrushchev's passing in the rest of the world did a Pravda spokesman announce that Monday's paper would report the news.

For roughly 30 hours or more the only way most Soviet citizens could find out that the man who ruled their country for a decade was dead was through listening to Radio Liberty and other foreign broadcasters.

There is important evidence now indicating that Khrushchev's reputation in many Soviet minds is far greater than it was when he was purged in 1964.

Then and Now

Then he was connected in popular opinion with the economic hardships of the early 1960s, the price increases of 1962 and the bread shortage of 1963. He was also blamed by many for the break with China, and for spending too much money in space while urgent needs here on earth went unmet.

But the seven years Khrushchev lived in obscure disgrace were long enough to demonstrate that many of the ills for which he was blamed have also been insoluble for his successors. With President Nixon scheduled soon to visit Peking, there can no longer be Soviet citizens who believe it was merely Khrushchev's tactlessness that produced Moscow-Peking enmity.

The Soviet economy has increased production since Khrushchev fell. But there are now 15-20 million more Soviet mouths to be fed than in 1964. And while the Soviet standard of living has risen, the rise has hardly been fast enough to satisfy an increasingly consumption-oriented society.

But it is among Soviet intellectuals—scientists, writers, teachers and the like — that the most positive re-evaluation of Khrushchev has taken place these last several years.

While he ruled, these elite groups tended to view Khrushchev as a crude, uneducated and unpredictable boor. They were grateful to him for cracking the Stalin myth, for releasing millions from the slave labor camps, for lifting the Iron Curtain, and for greatly widening the area of free speech and free press, notably by permitting the publication of Aleksandr Solzhneitsyn's classic novel, "One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich."

But they were repelled by what they considered his uncultured behavior — notably his performance of banging his shoe at the United Nations in 1960. They resented his support of the charlatan biologist, Trofim Lysenko. And most of all they were bitter at his tendency to treat from liberal attitudes and to denounce publicly some of the Soviet Union's most eminent intellectuals.

Seven years of the post-Khrushchev era, however, have taught many Soviet liberals that the alternative to Khrushchev was much worse. The Brezhnev leadership has put writers and other dissidents into jail or insane asylums where Khrushchev relied on verbal chastisement. The censorship in the Soviet Union today is far tighter than it was during most of the Khrushchev era. To many Soviet liberals it is now evident that the consequence of Khrushchev's removal was a partial counter revolution, a partial return to Stalinism which makes the Khrushchev era seem like the good old days.

Symbol of Liberalism?

Thus the possibility arises that in death Khrushchev may become the symbol of Soviet liberalism just as the dead Stalin has long been the symbol of Soviet reaction and obscurantism.

There is already a limited, a partial rehabilitation, ending his status as an unperson and assuring he will not be an uncorpse. It is the first small victory for those who would like to see the best part of the Khrushchev legacy restored and extended. In his case at least it is unlikely that the good he did in life will be finally and irrevocably interred with his bones.

Plea To Preserve It

THOSE of you who live in the Okanagan, or holiday here because you like the great outdoors and the unspoiled wilderness, should heed the message in the Provincial Government's Economic Report of the Okanagan-Shuswap Region, recently prepared for the Okanagan Water Basin Study.

The report states the next fifty years will see a three-fold growth in Okanagan population, severe competition between the subdividers and the orchardists for residential land, enormous potential for open-pit mining operations on our mountain ranges, and full utilization of all our forested back country.

A large increase in tourism is also expected. The report mildly suggests we should preserve those amenities which attract tourists. At the same time it suggests the government should gradually turn over to private enterprise our public camping and picnic facilities.

Nowhere in the report is there the slightest indication of proposals to keep some special prices of our wilderness land in its native state for the pleasure of those who live here, or as an inducement for tourists to come here to escape the pressures of the cities.

The message in the report is clear, that all the land and natural resources are to be used commercially and that these commercial industries are to be centred on maximum utilization of these resources.

The sad truth seems to be that all of the land of the Okanagan and Similkameen country, right to the tops of the mountains, is already spoken for by commercial interests. If you fly low over the mountains today you will see the wilderness land already well eaten into — by logging (much of it clear cut and with no evidence of reforestation); by open pit mining (at least with a promise of tidying up after); by irrigation dams; by ski areas; by long zipper scars of power and gas line rights of way.

The tomorrow predicted in the Economic Study is already here.

Although the 800 members of the Okanagan Similkameen Parks Society provide a strong and united voice to government, we are pygmies against the giant logging, mining and other commercial interests which now claim all the wilderness land. One even suspects that a substantial proportion of the pulp produced from our woods goes to telling how well the lumber companies are looking after our recreational interests up there in the woods, or to assure us that "multiple use" of select park sites like the Cathedral Lakes country or Brent mountain, is really best for all interests.

Every citizen who values the preservation of a few select areas of unspoiled wilderness — for sheer beauty, for our mental and physical health, for a legacy to hand to our children must strongly tell our government that we, too, have a right to some of the land.

By joining national and local conservation groups and by speaking out through public forums, we can have a voice in this battle for the preservation of some of the mountain wilderness and open spaces in our Okanagan Valley. — Sheila White, Publicity Chairman, Okanagan Similkameen Parks Society, Box 787, Summerland, B.C.

Tax Deferral

The tax deferral plan for senior citizens which is presently being studied by Victoria City Council (it has also been discussed by Saanich Council) merely serves to illustrate the inequitable system under which municipalities collect funds on a property levy basis to meet their budgeted expenses.

It is not difficult to understand the concern of our senior citizens as to how long they will be able to meet their tax obligations in view of the rapid escalation in general municipal taxes and school taxes despite the provincial government home-owner grant.

The answer, however, is not in the charity-oriented so-called "deferral" plan but in the total elimination of school taxes and the application of the home-owner grant to reduce the general municipal taxes, for the following reasons:

Senior citizens are for the most part retired and living on fixed incomes in this most inflationary period in our history. They are unlikely to have children of school age attending public institutions but they must contribute to their upkeep.

If they wish to keep their homes they must pay their share of the increased general municipal costs.

Is it too much to expect that those who worked a lifetime in this country at incredibly meagre wages and salaries by today's standards be relieved of some financial anxiety in whatever years of retirement lie ahead?—F.E.W.

Impressions

Nixon displays in times of stress, a healthy dis-interest in protocol and ceremonial flap. Trudeau, seems to try to convey this same impression by not wearing a necktie. With him, it's an excellent impression of a man on holiday. Let's hope Washington D.C. is somewhere on the tour. — John Gaul, 1527 Fort.

Blow Up

Why do the Alaskan people plead for 'postponement' of the Amchitka Blast, proposed by the U.S.A., why should it not be banned completely?

The U.S. Atomic Energy people have made the beastly stuff, now, as they say it will do very little damage, let them render it quite harmless, and bury it under the Pentagon. They are so evidently the cleverest people on earth, it should be easy for them to do better than blow up the Aleutian Islands, not to mention most of the British Columbian coast, possibly their own California coast, with a neat little display of earthquakes.

The Japanese should know what sort of damage the gaily proposed fireworks of the Americans can do. — G. F. Beale, 87 Chown Place.

Urgent Need

There are discussions about the redevelopment of downtown Victoria, especially the harbor area, the Reid high-rise and other buildings without due concern or consideration for the added effluent resulting from these developments. Common sense suggests that first things have to be dealt with first.

The most urgent problem is the proper treatment of the sewage, which will be more with every year to come. There is still a chance to acquire the necessary land to build treatment facilities for the benefit of all the municipalities of Greater Vancouver. The present sewage discharge is inadequate, unhealthful and spoils the beaches and waterfront.

It is impossible to discharge 18 million gallons of raw waste daily into the waters around Victoria and hope for the best. No beach around Victoria is unpolluted. Infectious hepatitis in Victoria from inadequate sewage disposal is twice that of other large Canadian cities. Tourists can admire at low tide the sewage as it emerges in stinking outfalls.

The Victoria Daily Times carried September 3, 1971, a report that discharge costs will be four times as high when treatment is added. So what? What is more important, the health of the population or saving money at the wrong time and the wrong place? We can not play with the future of our fast-growing community. Costs have to be met now, before acreage, properly situated, is unavailable and prices get entirely out of hand for the necessary first and second stages (maybe third) of treatment on an adequate scale.

If the city estimate for such a treatment plant now is $10 million (it will probably be more before such a plant is finished) it is still a lot cheaper than what it will cost a few years from now.

In running such a plant, sedimented waste can be dried and sold as fertilizer (human waste is the richest organic fertilizer) as is done already by other cities like Milwaukee, which has the product marketed under the trade name of Morganite. If the provincial government is approached with the right plan, maybe it will help with the expenses involved. — J. A. W. von Heyden, P.Eng. M.E.I.C., 992 Haliburton Rd.

Living Mines

There is a notion abroad that because a mine is a wasting asset, it should be held for the benefit of posterity. There is an analogy between mines and humans. Both are born, live and die. Humans regenerate the race and so do mines, because as a mine develops, the understanding of the relationship of ore deposition to the geology becomes clearer and the chance of discovering new mines becomes more certain.

The case of the western coal is different. No one knows how much coal we have but an output of 10 million tons a year could be maintained for a period running into thousands of years.

More than 100 useful products can be obtained from raw coal and the list constantly grows so that the burning of raw coal is a waste, but there are only a few places in the world where it is economic to produce these by-products at present.

By developing Canadian mines for new coal now, we shall gain the expertise in mining coal which we so sadly lack today, to produce coal for better purposes when the times comes. There is a whale of a difference between hard-rock and coal mining. — J. P. Thornton, 943 Wilmer Street.

Finger Prints

I remember some years ago we had quite a discussion on the subject of fingerprinting. At that time the Attorney-General, Mr. Bonner, was very much against it, no doubt with very good reasons.

His argument at that time was, "Why should we do the policeman's work for him." As I see it the policeman's work is guarding our lives and property and any legislation which helps the police do a better job of locating and convicting the criminals is a big gain for decent citizens. One thing is sure. The criminal objects violently to this legislation; so do the men who have abandoned their responsibilities.

Some of these law abiding citizens who have deeply "ingrained prejudice" may on investigation prove to be not so law abiding. If there is one thing the Mafiosa and other scum do not care for it is having their fingerprints on file. This would keep a lot of them out of this country and in "the land of the free."

I am not a cop lover or a cop hater but I would like to see our police able to use both hands against the thugs, muggers, dope pedlars and assorted vermin and get them out of circulation as soon as possible.

Fingerprinting and identification cards would be a great help to law enforcement and to our hopes for a peaceful life for decent citizens.

The police should not have to back into it. We, the people, should demand it and to hell with the national and international criminals to whom it would be very distasteful, as well as all pussy-footing editors who have not guts enough to take a stand. — Neil P. Kelly, R. R. 1.

60 Years Ago

From the Times of Sept. 15, 1911:

The chief topic of conversation — and of highly commendatory comment — in business and shipping circles today is the harbor improvements plan as outlined in the Times yesterday. The subject is one that has been in the minds of most of them for years as a desirable achievement of some future time, but the announcement made in these columns has transformed it overnight into a very live public question, and the certainty of consummation in time for this port to get its share of the Panama Canal traffic is being received enthusiastically by everyone.

British Exit Only Solution For Ireland

By PAUL JOHNSON
New Statesman

Mr. Heath is digging a pit for himself in Northern Ireland. It is not clear how deeply or seriously the government has considered the various long-term policies which are open to it in handling the Ulster problem.

All the evidence seems to suggest that it is living from hand to mouth, reacting to each successive crisis with more of the same treatment, and hoping that something will turn up. This, indeed, is the characteristic posture which British governments have adopted to Ireland.

Officially, the policy is for the security forces to maintain law and order until the "reforms" of the Stormont (Ulster) regime have time to reconcile the minority to its continued existence. But does any member of the cabinet honestly believe that either aspect of the policy is working, or is likely to do so in the future?

The truth is, the policy cannot possibly succeed, and sooner or later even a supremely obstinate man like Edward Heath will be brought to admit the fact. The question is how soon, how late?

Huge and hideous, the terrible examples of Algeria and Vietnam are before us to demonstrate the cost — not just in lives — of the failure of sophisticated modern governments to recognize that democracies cannot contain nationalism by force, and that if they try to do so they damage only themselves. Too late, the United States and France learned the bitter lesson.

The Algerian conflict destroyed the Fourth Republic, and left a fearful legacy; even today, there are more armed police and security troops in the city of Paris than in the whole of Ulster.

Vietnam shattered many American illusions, not least confidence in their native standards of public honor and decency; it educated an entire generation in violence and cynicism; it ended a quarter-century of sustained economic growth, undermined the world's strongest currency, and is now bringing about an "agonizing reappraisal" of America's international role.

British statesmen watched these tragedies unfold with pity and condescension. Thanks to British wisdom and experience, such errors had been avoided while Britain divested herself of a world empire which made the burdens carried by France and America seem puny by comparison. If only they had taken Britain's advice!

HEATH

How ironic, then, if Britain should now find herself dragged into a similar blind drama on her own doorstep.

Ironic, yet curiously appropriate, for Ireland has always been the sinister joker in the British pack. There, over the long centuries, all those qualities with which the British credit themselves — humanity, hatred of violence, moderation, flexibility, pragmatism, the ability to devise empirical solutions to logically insoluble problems — have been conspicuously absent.

British soldier on sentinel duty in Belfast

Ireland has been the one great historic failure of British statesmanship. Our first colony; now our last. It should come as no surprise if Ireland proves the deadly sting in the tail of British decolonization.

Let us look at the omens of disaster in turn, beginning with the minority. The government's policy hinges on its reconciliation. But the Stormont regime has existed for over half a century, time for two entirely new generations to grow up and form their own opinions and in that long period Stormont had never been able to aquire the loyalty of more than a handful of Catholics, let alone make serious inroads into the solid republicanism of two-fifths of its subjects.

"Reforms" are now being introduced: the Stormon White Paper boasts of them. But if these changes are desirable—indeed, it is admitted, essential—why were they resisted for 50 years? And why should it be thought that the men who resisted them so long, and so bitterly, can apply them with success?

It is not as though there has been any change of heart Stormont still stands for a "Protestant Parliament for a Protestantt people."

The reforms were introduced in response to violence, and under the urgent pressure of a British Labor government. They cannot, and they are not intended to, admit the minority to any substantial role in the government of Ulster. They are the whitewash on the sepulchre; and everyone in Ulster knows this.

Moreover, the attitude of the minority has changed decisively in the last two years. They were never reconciled to Stormont; but they had become resigned to it as at least a temporary solution.

In the 1950s and early 1960s there were very few people, on either side of the Border, who believed it could be removed by violence. The IRA were occasionally active. But they were forced to operate from primitive hideouts in the Republic; they could not move about freely among the Ulster minority, or expect refuge, assistance or even silence from most of its members.

In many parts of Belfast it was widely believed that the ghetto structure of the city was crumbling; that Catholics were moving into "Protestant" streets and vice versa; and that on the new housing estates a completely new pattern was emerging. Some of this was doubtless wishful thinking, and it certainly didn't apply to Londonderry.

Nevertheless, there was general agreement that the situation was growing no worse, and might even be improving. High-minded hopes were expressed for the future.

Today, the situation can only be compared to Palestine in the last days of the Mandate. The two populations have moved apart — physically, and still more emotionally. The minority no longer believes that even a modus vivendi is possible under Stormont.

It is this which makes the reforms irrelevant, for no tinkering with the details, under the existing constitution, can produce anything but a solidly-Protestant governing majority in Parliament.

More seriously, the minority as a whole has now renounced parliamentary politics and opted for direct action, ranging from civil disobedience and demonstrations to bullets and gelignite.

Force has set the Ulster problem in motion again — as, indeed the threat of force by the Unionists created it — and it will not now be renounced until the problem is resolved.

The IRA has ceased to be a handful of cranks, mostly from the South, and has become the activist wing of a broad nationalist movement which embraces the entire Catholic population. It is no longer possible to treat them as civil criminals; they are guerrillas, operating from the base of active popular sympathy.

To make matters still worse, both the British army and the British government have now forfeited their claims to neutrality. They were never very substantial; but the recklessness with which Messrs Heath and Maudling threw away these important cards makes one despair.

Since the emergency began Stormont has been trying to persuade Whitehall that internment is the solution to the security problem. It is not; it is an anachronism, appropriate to the days when the IRA were an isolated minority of eccentrics, whose identities were notorious.

The army did not initially like the idea. But it seems to have made the mistake of failing to develop its own intelligence service, rigorously separate from the machinery of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, and thus inherited not only ancient files, lists and informers, but ancient attitudes.

When, therefore, Heath surrendered to Faulkner over internment, as the price of cancellation of the Protestant marches, the machinery of repression was used, and was seen to be used, exclusively against Catholics.

The violence that followed, which caught the government completely by surprise, accelerated the process whereby the IRA is becoming integrated with the Catholic populations as a whole.

Overnight, the army became identified with Stormont, and the IRA with liberation.

The way the operation was carried out produced the maximum political damage, and the minimum military advantage.

The army, to the Catholics, has become the enemy; an enemy, moreover, that can be made ridiculous. There it stands, in Ulster, a blind colossus; though not, alas, a dumb one.

To complete the catalogue of folly, Mr. Heath has now lost his temper with poor, reasonable Jack Lynch, the best Dublin premier any British government could possibly hope to have. By telling Lynch that what goes on in Ulster is none of Ireland's business — as though those thousands of refugees streaming across the frontier were figments of the Celtic imagination — Heath identified himself squarely with the official Stormont political theory.

One might have supposed that Mr. Faulkner himself dictated the wording of the telegram, were it not clear, from internal evidence, that it is Heath's unaided work — the language he is accustomed to use towards chairmen of the public corporations and other lesser breeds.

Heath has already taught the Ulster minority that they have no political redress, and that their only recourse is violence. Now he invites the Republic of Ireland to draw the same conclusion.

Thus, it seems to me, the problem is bound to be internationalized. Hitherto Dublin governments have played Britain's game.

They have given no assistance, and precious little sympathy, to the Ulster minority. They have made it extremely difficult for the IRA to operate from the Republic. They have prosecuted arms smugglers.

Diplomatically, they have exercised every possible restraint, even in the U.K.; and they have made no move to enlist the support of Britain's enemies, though in the past this has always been the response of Irish nationalism. They have, in fact, stood idly by.

But if the horrors of Ulster continue, no Irish government, it seems to me, can avoid becoming directly involved.

What happens then? Last week's border incident has already brought demands from Stormont for a virtual closure of the frontier. What will they ask Britain to do next? Build an Iron Curtain? Put up a Berlin Wall? How far is Heath prepared to go to maintain the colons of Ulster?

There are signs of deep division among the British people, as they watch Ulster through the unblinking eye of television. Many fear, rightly, that as with Vietnam and Algeria, the strains of Ulster will soon be felt in the homeland, not indeed for the first time.

The Irish problem is the graveyard of British generals and statesmen. There are plenty of ancient spectres beckoning Heath on, as he wades into the quagmire. Can his talks with Lynch at last change history?

For Britain must, and in time certainly will, disengage from Ireland. It is interesting to note that even those who still argue that Ulster is British, and support our military presence, do so increasingly on the sole grounds that to withdraw the troops would precipitate a blood-bath, in which the Protestant extremists would hurl themselves on the defenceless Catholic minority.

If this is indeed likely, it is an unanswerable reason for disarming the Protestants now, something no British government has ever dared to attempt. But in my view to accept the blood-bath theory is simply to capitulate to Unionist bluff, a bluff successfully maintained for nearly a century, which created the anomaly of a separate Ulster in the first place.

It is now time that the bluff was called. In any case, the responsibility for the protection of Irishmen of all creeds should be placed where it morally belongs — on the Irish government.

A period of direct administration from Westminster could be used to make this transfer of responsibility smooth and uneventful; and even afterwards Britain should be prepared to offer any assistance the Irish government may reasonably require.

But direct rule is a terminus a quo; the terminus ad quem is, and must be seen to be, all-Ireland rule from Dublin. Only when this objective is accepted as an inescapable political fact will violence cease to pay dividends. The whole of Ireland can then move into the secular age.

Victims of the System

By ANTHONY LEWIS

LONDON — The first reports from China by the newly admitted American correspondents have been especially fascinating in their picture of egalitarianism in that society.

The absence of private cars, the modest salary differentials, the doctors taking their turn of service in remote rural areas — all this has great appeal to those troubled by the individual acquisitiveness of our world.

The comfortable American or European has begun to weary of his society's emphasis on things, on possessions. He believes that their worship brings unhappiness and social discord.

He wishes there were a way to install other values, ones that would build a feeling of community instead of discontent. Perhaps, he thinks, the Chinese Communists have found it.

Perhaps they have. Anyone not distorted by hatred of Communism as an abstraction would wish the Chinese well in trying to give that immense population minimum standards of life. But in the West we are bound to be wary of the means used by the Chinese toward that end—the means of authoritarianism.

Fifty years ago Soviet Communism seemed to many to offer the hope of egalitarian idealism. That was what Lincoln Steffens meant when he said he had seen the future and it worked. But it did not work.

We know now that unrestrained power may corrupt the best philosophical intentions. We know that government in the name of workers and peasants may breed privilege as gross as any other. We know that sacrifice of individuality for the declared common good may exact the most appalling price from the human spirit.

At least everyone ought to know. But hope, clouding judgment, dies hard. How hard is poignantly revealed in an interview published in last month's Encounter.

It is with Eduard Goldstuecker, a leading Czecho Communist intellectual, former diplomat and rector of Charles University, who now lives in exile in England. The interview was done by two editors of Der Spiegel, Fritjof Meyer and Klaus Rainhardt.

Goldstuecker spoke of the hope in the Prague Spring of 1968 and its crushing by the Russians. If nothing else, he said, the nature of Soviet Communism had been exposed. But why should it have taken until 1968 for a man of such great analytical intelligence to understand that?

"In the 1930's," he said, "we Communists did not all really know what was happening. We grew up in a world in which the Soviet Union was the only great revolution, the moral prestige of great revolution, the moral prestige of which was very high . . . we took no notice of criticism, which we regarded as hostile propaganda."

The interviewers asked: Even when the criticism came from comrades?

"When that happened, they ceased to be comrades and became class enemies."

When did he first realize that the party was not always right?

"In 1951, when my closest friends, whom I knew to be honorable and upright comrades, were arrested. But even then I tried to persuade myself that the party must know what it was doing, and that no doubt there were facts unknown to me that justified what it was doing."

It was only when he himself was arrested in 1951, and interrogated on fantastic changes over 18 months, that he told himself the truth — that "this system, that I had held to be the highest level of truth attained by humanity, used lies as the basis of its propaganda and its policy."

It is a sad interview, filled with the pathos of contradiction. Goldstuecker says candidly that after a half century of Soviet Communism, the people in Russia and Eastern Europe "live in relative poverty, in unfreedom, basically under police regimes."

Yet he says he would not have allowed free elections in Czechoslovakia because the Soviet Union would "rightly" have regarded that "as endangering the unity of the working class."

Such a view seems to us bewildering, but Goldstuecker must regard it as a necessary concession to preserve the hope of Communism.

And the phenomenon is hardly confined to him. The man who presides over the shell of Czechoslovakia, Gustav Hasak, was himself a victim of the Stalinist terror. Now he in turn disciplines others, probably in the belief that he is preventing something worse. Like Goldstuecker, he is a victim of the system. All are victims.

The conflict between individualism and commitment to a system will continue. We in the West—and most people in Eastern Europe if they could speak — agree with Eduard Goldstuecker when he says:

"After mature consideration I have come to the conclusion that the only revolutionary thing in the world is the truth."

Apartment Building Up 40%

By BRUCE LITTLE
Financial Times News Service

OTTAWA — An apartment building boom is making it almost a sure bet that the government's target of 220,000 housing unit starts this year will be reached, if not passed.

By the end of August, housing starts were running 40 per cent ahead of the 1970 pace. The big apartment and row housing projects were the main reason.

This is in sharp contrast to the situation last year. Then, house building activity fell off sharply in the second quarter because of high interest rates and a slump in sales.

Many potential house buyers were put off by the dismal economic outlook, and did more shopping than buying.

A strong injection of federal mortgage money got the recovery under way later in the year.

This year, apartment and row housing starts are 45 per cent up from 1970, and single-family homes are up by 34 per cent.

The apartment boom will at least be maintained in the next few months.

Lenders have been getting far more applications for rental construction money than for owners' and builders' loans.

LENDERS BUSY

Between January and July, mortgage lenders approved loans worth more than $1.1 billion, almost $500,000 more than in the corresponding period in 1970.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., the federal agency, has approved slightly fewer loans than last year. This means that all of the extra money for housing has come from the private sector — the banks, trust companies, and life insurance companies.

Buyers seem to have overcome their resistance to relatively high interest rates. Some bank and trust companies trimmed their mortgages rates late last winter, but the minimum rate bank rate is now up to nine per cent again, and lenders say they cannot meet the demand for loans.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE

Granite

Five Vancouver mineral firms have joined to carry out a deep drill test of one of the world's largest iron anomalies near Neepawa, Man.

The formation, believed to be 25 miles long and up to five miles wide, will be explored by Granite Mountain Mines Ltd., Gibbex Mines Ltd., Tupco Mines Ltd., Blue Gulch Explorations Ltd. and Texacal Resources Ltd.

In 1947 a drill hole penetrated the ferrous structure but was halted before depth was established. Property has been idle since.

Granite Mountain will put up half of the $70,000 needed to drill and will earn 25 per cent interest, the largest equity of the group.

Great-West

In its first mid-year report, Great-West Life Assurance Co. shows net income of $4.55 million ($1.97 a share) on premium, investment and capital gains income of $183.46 million to June 30.

Only sales of insurance and annuities were compared with the first half of 1970: $917.9 million vs. $653.8 million, although health insurance sales were up 8 per cent. Total business in force came to $13.29 billion.

Dolly Varden

Silver ore reserves increased by more than 5 million ounces during the past year compared with the previous 12 months, reports Dolly Varden Mines Ltd., which has property at Alice Arm.

At a milling rate of 700 tons a day, the new figure gives an operating life of seven years to the proposed mine, which will require $4.9 million to bring to production.

Exploration of the various claims shows copper, zinc and other commercially viable minerals.

President Peter Cromie said financing is being sought to bring the property into production.

CNR

Canadian National Railways has set up a new company, Grand Trunk Corp., to direct the operations of its three subsidiaries in the U.S.

Properties included are the Grand Trunk Western Railroad with headquarters in Detroit; Central Vermont Railway, and the Duluth, Winnipeg and Pacific Railway.

R. A. Bandeen, vice-president of CN's Great Lakes region, will assume the additional position of president of the new holding company.

Capt. Inter.

Captain International Ltd. reports net income of $60,204 or $2.11 a share for the six month period ended June 30, compared with $6,943 a year ago.

Financial statements for the first half of 1971 and 1970 were consolidated to reflect the acquisition of Captain Hotel Systems N.V., as a wholly owned subsidiary.

Total revenues for the first half of 1971 amounted to $1.47 million compared with a restated $1 million for the same period in 1970.

President G. Arnold Armstrong said Captain International, with outstanding sales in Europe, is considering opening a plant overseas.

Brycon

Brycon Industries Ltd. has relinquished its option to acquire Chateau Chef, Inc., a Seattle-based food manufacturing and distributing company.

The Vancouver-based company said it had been notified by the Vancouver Stock Exchange that the exchange would not approve Brycon's plan to take over the Seattle firm.

The sum of $54,273 advanced to Chateau Chef by Brycon will be repaid with interest.

Husky

Husky Oil Ltd. plans to acquire outstanding publicity-held shares of Empire State Oil Co., Thermopolis, Wyo. Huskey subsidiaries now own about 55 per cent of Empire stock.

The Husky proposal, subject to approval by regulatory authorities and certain other conditions, is to exchange 1¼ Husky common shares for each Empire State share.

Reitman's

Reitman's Canada Ltd. has reported net earnings of just over $1 million (97 cents a share) in the first six months of 1971 compared with $754,243 (72½ cents) in the corresponding period last year.

Sales so far this year were $27.9 million compared with $22.49 million in the first half of 1970.

Okanagan

Record revenue, cash flow and earnings are reported by Okanagan Helicopters Ltd. for the six months ended July 31.

Income from helicopter operations was $4.94 million, over the restated revenue of an increase of $1.7 million $3.2 million in 1970.

Cash flow was $1.36 million, an increase of $826,240 over the previous $543,353.

Net earnings were $312,369 (42 cents a share, or 36 cents on a fully diluted basis), compared with $13,464 after an extraordinary loss of $131,569 on disposal of aircraft.

W. Decalta

Six wells will be drilled in Mackenzie Valley holdings of Western Decalta Petroleum Ltd. this winter.

They include four wells earned by doing seismic work disclosing prospects in 253,578 acres of drilling permits, through which Western Decalta and its associates will earn 50 per cent.

Two other tries will be done at no cost to the company.

Consolidated net income for the first half was up 16.7 per cent at $754,000 (10.6 cents vs. 9.3 cents a share), on net oil-sales of $2.59 million (up 24.3 per cent) and gas sales of $597,000 (down 2.1 per cent).

U.S. Securities Official Wants More Staff, Money

VANCOUVER (CP) — A U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission official says government agencies charged with policing the securities industry must have adequate staff and funds to do a proper job.

James Needham of Washington said that although the securities industry in the United States works largely through self-regulation, there is always the need for a government agency to make sure the rules are adhered to.

Needham, one of five SEC commissioners charged with policing U.S. brokerage firms and stock exchanges, was here to address an Investment Bankers Association convention.

Alan G. Thompson, president of the Investment Dealers Association of Canada, said the Canadian securities industry "is doing a wonderful job of self-regulation" and is not in need of more government regulations to ensure protection of the public's interest.

Thompson, a partner with Richardson Securities of Canada in Winnipeg, said he agreed with the principle of disclosure.

"The more disclosure there is the better it is," he said.

"By more disclosure the people will understand the free enterprise system beter and will perhaps move in an opposite direction to where we seem to be heading now, which is towards socialism."

IOS President Resigns Post

GENEVA (AP) — Robert E. Slater has resigned as president of IOS Ltd., the group of Geneva-based mutual funds and financial services.

Milton F. Meissner, executive vice-president of IOS, said Slater's resignation will be effective Oct. 1 though he will serve in a consulting capacity as long as Robert L. Vesco, chairman of the group retains control.

Slater, 54, has been named vice-chairman and chief executive officer of National Liberty Corp. a life and liability insurer in Valley Forge, Pa.

Vesco gained control of IOS after Bernard Cornfeld resigned as chief executive officer. He also is chairman of International Controls in Fairfield, N.J.

Top Brass At Ford, GM Sell Shares

DETROIT (AP) — The president of Ford Motor Co. and the Chevrolet divisional vice-president of General Motors Corp. have sharply cut their holdings of company stock, the latest monthly report of the Securities and Exchange Commission on "insider transactions" says.

John Z. DeLorean, GM vice-president and Chevrolet general manager, was reported to have sold 1,102 shares July 9, leaving him with only 302 shares. GM stock prices ranged from $79¾ to $79½ that day.

Lee A. Iacocca, Ford president, disposed of 5,000 shares, almost a quarter of his holdings, in 2,500-share batches July 7 and July 23. Ford stock prices ranged from $62⅛ to $62⅜ July 7 and $64⅞ to $64½ July 23.

Reporters were unable to reach Iacocca and a company spokesman said there would be no comment on the transactions.

De Lorean's transaction was his second such in the last three months. On June 16 he sold 2,000 GM shares.

At that time he said he had used the money to purchase some ranch land to be used in a program to help orphaned children. His wife, Kelly, already is involved in such work near Detroit.

The Chevrolet chief was reported "out of town on vacation" Tuesday and unavailable.

The SEC requires all "insiders" — officers and directors privy to top-level company plans and decisions — to report any stock dealings to it monthly.

The SEC said reports in hand for the current month showed J. Edward Lundy, a director and Ford executive vice-president in charge of finance, disposed of 8,000 Ford shares Aug. 2 and 5,000 shares Aug. 17, reducing his direct holdings to 225 shares.

MORE CHEQUES BOUNCING

TORONTO (CP) — Bad cheques are becoming an increasing problem for business, says the Better Business Bureau of Metropolitan Toronto.

What it adds up to, says the bureau, is that the consumer is not playing fair with business.

Tom Rimmer, the bureau's vice-president, said in an interview it is mostly small businesses that are plagued with rubber cheques.

He said the proprietor of a Toronto dry cleaning establishment complained to the bureau that he receives an average of 250 bad cheques a month.

Mr. Rimmer estimated about eight million worthless cheques are passed annually in Canada.

The merchant, he said, has almost no means at his disposal to curb the tide of phoney cheques.

"In this age of consumerism, a customer is outraged if a merchant will not accept a cheque. The customer claims he has an honest face. But there is no such thing anymore."

It is difficult to obtain a conviction for passing worthless cheques, said Mr. Rimmer, because the person pressing charges must prove the cheque writer deliberately set out to obtain merchandise or services through fraud.

The bureau frequently receives complaints from merchants about the bad-cheque problem but can only appeal to the consumer "to give merchants a fair break."

"The consumer, after all, screams bloody murder if he feels he has been treated badly by a merchant."

Mercantile Spreads To Edmonton

MONTREAL (CP) — The Mercantile Bank of Canada announced today it will open its first branch in Edmonton at the end of September.

Paul H. Austin, president, said the introduction of Mercantile's banking facilities to Edmonton is in line with the bank's plans to establish branches in industrial centres to serve Canada's growing business community.

"We are continuing to investigate the potential of other communities across Canada to determine the best locations for additional branches."

The bank had been restricted in growth since 1967 because of federal government legislation. However, the government and the First National City Bank of the United States, which controls Mercantile, reached an agreement last February.

The agreement eliminated growth restrictions with the approval of a program to ensure that Canadian residents acquire at least 75 per cent ownership of the capital stock of the Mercantile Bank by the end of 1980.

In the six months ended July 31, 1971, assets of the bank grew to $277 million from $188 million, an increase of 48 per cent.

The Mercantile Bank was incorporated in 1953. During its first 10 years branches were opened in Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver. Later branches were established in Calgary, Winnipeg, Quebec City and Halifax.

$1 Million Fund For Disabled Aluminum Miners

TORONTO (CP) — The Aluminum Co. of Canada Ltd. announced Tuesday that the company and the Newfoundland government have agreed to set up a $1 million fund to aid miners disabled while working at the company's fluorspar mine at St. Lawrence, Nfld.

The fund, believed the first of its kind in Canada, also willl assist the widows and children of dead miners.

The fund was a main issue in a six-month strike against Alcan by the St. Lawrence Workers' Protective Union, whose 350 members returned to work last weekend.

A company spokesman said first payments from the fund will begin later this month and that about 100 disabled miners and widows eventually are expected to get payments of up to $1,000 a year.

The fund is set up under a cost-sharing agreement between the company and the Newfoundland government.

New Director On B.C. Bank

VANCOUVER (CP) — Edmonton businessman A. Hoadley Mitchell has been elected to the Bank of British Columbia's board of directors, says bank chairman Albert E. Hall.

Mitchell, president of Mitchell and Associates Ltd., is well known to the business community, is a director of Interprovincial Steel and Pipe Corporation Ltd., Roman Corporation and the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada. He also is a governor of Ridley College, Toronto, and a member of the Edmonton advisory board, National Trust Company Limited.

PROSTAGLANDINS: Miracle Medicine of Tomorrow?

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — PGs promise to be tomorrow's astounding new medicines, with many uses, such as:

- A perfectly safe, once-a-month birth control tablet.
- Or if pregnancy had occurred, a safe drug to bring about abortion.
- Or a drug to shorten the time a woman is in normal labor.
- A potent medicine to reduce high blood pressure, to boost dangerously low pressure, to pull people out of shock, or to save them from congestive heart failure.
- A drug to cure or prevent stomach ulcers.
- A drug to combat the pains and swellings of arthritis.
- And perhaps some yet unpredictable roles in human health.

IN MOST CELLS

PGs means prostaglandins, hormone-like chemicals that occur naturally in most cells of the body. The largest amounts occur in human semen, and they became named prostaglandins because at first the male prostate gland was thought to be their source.

There are at least six primary PGs, and eight secondary ones drived from them, with different PG's producing different effects.

PGs are both old and new.

They are new in the sense that chemists have recently succeeded in producing them in sufficient amounts, synthetically, to expand research into their potentials.

FOUND IN 1934

And they are old — discovered in 1934 by Dr. Ulf S. von Euler of the Karolinska Institute in Stockholm, a Nobel Prize winner in medicine and physiology in 1970.

Dr. von Euler back then isolated a factor from the seminal vesicles of sheep that acted to lower blood pressure, and that also produced contractions in the smooth muscle lining the uterus or womb. He coined the name prostaglandins for a mixture of active substances produced in later research.

But progress toward application had to await mainly some brilliant work by chemists to purify PG's from animal material — a ton of sheep glands yielded only one 500th of an ounce of PG in order to identify it, then to make it synthitically, then to sort out and synthesize the major protaglandins in pure form. This now has been done.

Closest perhaps to general use are PGs in birth control, thanks in main part to pioneering work by Dr. Sultan M. M. Karim of Makerere University School of Medicine in Uganada, and Drs. Marc Bygdeman and Nils Wigvist of the Karolinska Institute.

They first used a protaglandin to induce labor, near a women's term. Then they used PG to induce abortions as late as five months in pregnancy, by infusing the drug into a vein. The PGs worked in both cases by bringing about contractions of the uterus or womb, a normal event during childbirth.

PGs apparently can also act to prevent a fertilized egg from becoming implanted in the wall of the uterus, or from being maintained there.

Through stepping up or calming down blood pressure, other PGs show promise of becoming agents to control shock — when blood pressure drops dangerously — congestive heart failure, and perhaps even coronary artery disease, say recent reports to the American Heart Association.

Other researchers report evidence that PG's can control the flow of gastic juices and acids, thus offering a possible way of preventing or curing stomach ulcers. Still others report indications that PGs might be useful in overcoming male sterility and in combatting arthritis and rheumatism.

Wiser, Relaxed By Meditating

By IAN HAMILTON
Times Staff

Members of the Students' International Meditation Society, 1270 Pandora, claim they're much wiser and more relaxed than their non-meditating counterparts.

They feel they've got the stresses if life beat and advise non-believers to think harder.

"Our biggest problem is keeping up a supply of teachers to equal the demand," says resident teacher John Cowhig, the moving force behind SIMS in Victoria. "It's all so easy to learn and the results are fantastic."

INTRODUCTION

High school and university students have the opportunity of finding out for themselves Wednesday at an introductory talk at the Pandora centre at 8 p.m.

SIMS adheres to a "simple and scientific" technique called transcendental meditation, introduced several years ago by a globe-trotting monk named Maharishi Maheshi Yogi. His followers now claim to be the fastest-growing North American campus movement, with more than 70,000 members on 400 U.S. campuses and an annual growth rate of 250 per cent.

Victoria is national SIMS headquarters after beginning operations last year. The student group shares facilities with an adult TM branch and Cowhig claims about 2,000 students and 1,500 adults have been taught the technique since 1965 in Victoria.

NO GENIUS

He claims you don't have to be a genius to be successful at probing into your mind, adding that anybody can learn the simple mechanical technique.

If it's a snap to learn it isn't easy to describe how the method works, at least for high school graduate Patsy Nugent of 1003 Newport Avenue. The 18-year-old finds it hard to describe how she "looks into myself," but she swears the mind over matter routine has given her extra bursts of energy come homework time.

Dan Scoones, 19, of 790 Rogers, claims he used to have problems getting to sleep. After learning the technique he says he can fall asleep anytime or any place, even when he shouldn't in the middle of the day. He's that relaxed.

SIMS publicity brochures point to physiological studies which conclude results are "beneficial changes" in everything from oxygen consumption to skin resistance.

OFF BAD TRIPS

Cowhig also claims tests have shown drug abusers soon get off their bad trips when they learn the Maharishi's methods because the later trips are so much better, yet beneficial at the same time.

Using himself as an example of another positive aspect, he says he broke himself of a two-pack a day smoking habit through positive thinking.

Ultimately the Maharishi would like to see 10 per cent of the world turning the rest of the population into a relaxed and intelligent state. "World peace would then be possible," according to Cowhig.

Pathans Undisturbed By Change of Rulers

PATHANS, Karachi (WP)—The spectacular brown dusty mountains of the Khyber Pass, through which camel caravans carry officially winked-at cargoes of smuggled goods from Afghanistan, are populated by the Pathan tribesmen whom the British found it so difficult to subdue when they ruled the subcontinent.

The Pakistan government does not find it much easier to maintain law and order, but tries to keep the tribesmen happy by continuing the British system of pay-offs to tribal leaders and allowing tribal law to rule everywhere in the frontier region except for a strip 50 feet wide on each side of the roads.

At Landi Kotal, the major town in the Khyber Pass, shops are full of smuggled cloth and plastic items. Many of the shops further from the road specialize in hashish, cocaine and guns.

One dope and gun dealer entertained a visitor with tea recently while he tried to negotiate a sale in broken English.

He replied with an enthusiastic grin when asked whether he liked hashish, and he was particularly eager to sell a couple of single-shot pistols whose clip for attaching them to a skirt pocket doubles as the trigger. He offered Czechoslovakian-made bullets to accompany the pistols and, in addition to his drugs and guns, proudly displayed the latest copies of the Urdu translation of a Soviet magazine to which he subscribed.

Mother Earth Draws Praise As 'Best Show'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Can a stage musical make it to the bigtime with such subjects as pollution, over-population, chemicals in foods, radioactivity and care of the elderly?

Nightly audiences at the Huntington Hartford Theatre seem to think so. They give the new revue Mother Earth standing ovations.

With a few exceptions, the critics seem to agree.

Bill Edwards of Daily Variety: "With all its faults and growing pains, Mother Earth is still the finest show to happen in many a year. It is better than Hair . . . It doubtless will be a pattern for the next era of musical comedy."

That's strong praise from a tough trade journal.

INSTANT SUCCESS

Everybody talks about ecology, but nobody was writing rock musicals about it. Until Ron Thronson came along. He is a part-time teacher and social worker with a master's degree in theatre from Cal State, Long Beach.

Thronson became involved in the 180-seat South Coast Repertory Theatre in Costa Mesa, in surfing country 70 miles south of Los Angeles. He worked up some skits and song lyrics dealing with the problems of our planet. The music was supplied by another member of theatre, Toni Shearer, a towering blonde beauty who is an accomplished musician and singer.

Mother Earth opened at the South Coast Repertory last January with a non-professional cast of 10 and proved an instant success. The show was recast in Hollywood, with three of the original performers remaining, including Miss Shearer. It opened in San Francisco June 21, again with a harvest of critical kudos.

The show is a rare theatrical experience. It is played on a single stark set with telephone poles, an old car and other symbols of civilization. A five-piece rock group is onstage to provide the thumping beat and the youthful cast plays the skits and numbers with great verve.

Some of the messages are heavy-handed, but mostly the accent is on entertainment. Unlike Hair, there is no nudity or profanity. Nothing to offend anyone, in fact, except anti-ecologists.

Man Shot

MADRID, Spain (AP) — One man was shot dead Monday as an estimated 5,000 construction workers went on strike to demand higher pay, police reported. They said the man was shot while distributing "subversive" propaganda in the village of Leganes.

IT WILL WORK

The Reid Centre —Time to Begin

Yes, please, count me in all the way with those non-vocalizing citizens who are solidly for the so-called Reid Centre and wish to heaven they'd bloody well get on with it.

If I appear more than ordinarily irascible on the subject it's simply because I chanced to take out my own Victorian citizenship papers at precisely the time the project first became a possibility, followed its ups and downs assiduously and marvelled at the emotion-charged delaying tactics that continue to put in jeopardy what might be one of our town's most attractive — and most needed — ornaments.

Much of the clamoring opposition from a small section of the public it seems to me, has been fired by people who are as well-meaning and as fanatical as anti-vivisectionists. There's nothing quite so disagreeable as bluntly disagreeing with a man whose motives are pure, but whose reasoning is rooted in blind prejudice. Yet surely the time is over-due to recognize what a menace they are to the immediate and long-range future of this nicest of all cities.

jack scott

If the Reid Centre goes belly-up it will go belly-up because of a very small minority of citizens who have a passionate, paranoic hatred of high buildings — any and all high buildings, regardless of their site or the pressing need for them.

Like all of us — those who have spent their lives here and those of us who have elected to join them — they yearn to keep Victoria a quaint, quiet, slow-paced village. It is a nostalgia syndrome for the days of the horse-and-buggy and the squire in his ivy-covered mansion and a quality of life that, regretably, has already passed.

In a city where, almost anywhere, you may walk 10 paces to the left or right to open up sybaritic views of sea, sky and mountain, they hysterically oppose any kind of man-made structure that might make them walk an extra five paces.

In the interests of that single-minded, hopeless cause many of these opponents are willing to sabotage the vision and plans of highly-qualified men whose love of the city is equally deep.

To keep out the skyscrapers they are willing to live with a sprawl that will shove the city's borders into beautiful countryside that can never be reclaimed, a low-profile sprawl that could engulf this whole lower corner of Vancouver Island.

To keep out the skyscrapers they are willing to live with the two, three or four-storey apartment buildings that already proliferate the city and its suburbs, the squat, ugly characterless frame slabs that are so often no more than a tax-haven for investors without a thought for the city's esthetics.

To keep out the skyscrapers they are willing to see the slow death of the city's inner core, the downtown heart of the place that's already in an advanced state of strangulation. The very juices of the city, the sophistication, the invitation to fun and culture and social intercourse that give a city meaning, are all but dried-up in Victoria, a tomb when the office workers leave it behind.

To keep out the skyscrapers they are willing to delay indefinitely, perhaps for decades, the usefulness and beautification of the city's Inner Harbor, a sickening industrial junkyard. The face we turn to the world is a hideous one of squalor. (A story about this: In the planning department at city hall they put up a strip of pictures of the harbor's bleak, shabby skyline taken from the water. When Mayor Courtney Haddock chanced by he remarked, "Marvellous what they could do with pictures in those old days, eh?" And he was told: "It was taken last Thursday.")

No one suggests that the Reid Centre is a magic answer to all of the present or foreseable problems, but it is the one sensible, imaginative beginning to answering many of them, a project securely within the control of the city's planning department, yet demanding the initiative of private capital.

It will be the beginning of the long-delayed program of urban renewal in the Inner Harbor where some 80 per cent of the waterfrontage, from the Bapco Paint plant to the Johnson Street Bridge, may be developed over the years under public authority.

It will mean the beginning of a new dynamism in the stagnating city core. Stand in Bastion Square today and look at that blighted harbor front, a place everyone tries to avoid showing to a visitor. Imagine those splendid towers and promenades where you may stroll the esplanades and dine in a penthouse restaurant that will open a distant view of the Straits and the snow-capped Olympics, where you may sip an aperitif on the terrace and watch the ships passing by, a place where a theatre, shops, boutiques, a marina, hotel and apartments, a social centre will inject an adrenelin shot of humanity into the downtown cemetery. On its own, it will be a beginning to making us a 16-hour-a-day city, as Lewis Mumford sees the ideal, rather than an eight-hour-a-day city.

It will surely be the beginning to attract more developments that must come in an area that every projection indicates must accommodate a population that will grow to more than a quarter of a million people within the next 15 years, a growth that will force the whole area from Sidney to Sooke into new concepts of satellite towns, green belts and the rest. Eventually we will have to face the fact, faced by every fast-growing city in the world, that when you can no longer go out you dam'd well have to go up.

That this will mean a great, massive conglomerate of megastructures thrusting to the sky, as the highrise paranoics would have us believe, is simply nonsense.

However steady our demographic growth may be Victoria will never be another Manhattan, not even another Vancouver. Moreover, in all of Canada no city has more legislation to protect us from indiscriminate highrises (Vancouver's West End, for example has twice the density that will be permissible here) and a planning staff of unquestioned ability dedicated to the proposition that a beautiful and exciting skyline need not mean an end to the quality of life we think is uniquely our own.

By every test the Reid Centre, both in its original and present concept (though I prefer the original) is just exactly what this city needs. Let's get on with it.

Uvic Linguist Gets $24,000

Dr. Jean-Paul Vinay, head of the linguistics department at the University of Victoria, has been awarded a $24,000 grant for further research on bilingual Canadian terms and phrases, the university announced today.

The grant will cover work over the next two years to update and enlarge the Canadian dictionary, published in 1962 with Vinay as editor-in-chief.

The intention is to reprint the dictionary, expanded to perhaps 100,000 words. At the same time Vinay is researching techniques for computerizing a central word bank which would meet the problem all dictionaries face of becoming obsolete within a decade.

The $24,000 grant comes from the Donner Canadian Foundation. The foundation is particularly interested in projects related to French Canada and is one of the major supporters of interdisciplinary projects not eligible for assistance from public granting agencies.

The foundation's funds originated with William H. Donner, an American industrialist and philanthropist who died in 1953.

Vinay, a Parisian with an international reputation in linguistics, came to the University of Victoria five years ago from the University of Montreal.

The department earlier gained international recognition through the work of Uvic's Lexicographical Centre for Canadian English which, under the direction of Dr. Harry Scargill, produced the Dictionary of Canadianisms on Historical Principles in 1967.

The Centre is also headquarters for the forthcoming survey of Canadian English, to be directed by Dr. Scargill.

'Coast Look' For New Complex

A new building complex, of brick and Douglas fir with leaded glass windows, is under construction on property running from Courtney through to the liquor store on Humboldt.

Estimated cost of the project, which includes relocation of the liquor store, is between $750,000 and $1 million.

To be called Nootka Court, the structure is designed by former Victorian Wayne Wenstop, who returned from Australia four months ago after working as a town planner for an architectural-engineering company.

He has been commissioned by Hans Hartwig of Diversified Holding Ltd. who moved here from Edmonton five months ago.

Wenstop, who says the complex has been designed to create a truly west coast atmosphere "with no phoney English looks about it," says the development will be built in two parts.

LIQUOR STORE MOVE

The first phase, to be finished in the first week of November, will have the liquor store relocated on Courtney in a building with timbered interiors and hand-painted wooden signs taking the place of plastic ones.

Two wooden bridges will connect the complex with a mall running from Courtney to Humboldt, centred with a large courtyard, landscaped to complement totem poles, to be built by Tony Hunt.

Included will be 12 specialty shops and a restaurant, complete with dance floor and facilities for entertainers.

The mall and centre courtyard, which will be 50 by 60 feet, will be open to the sky to create what Wenstop hopes will be a "warm, friendly atmosphere with an open feeling to it."

Wenstop explains, "We are not building this just for tourists — it's for Victorians too. There are good shops around the city, but scattered."

Planning began two months ago and construction is expected to be completed by December.

CYCLIST DIES

A 17-year-old cyclist died in Royal Jubilee Hospital this morning as a result of injuries suffered when she was struck by a truck on the Island Highway six miles south of Nanaimo Tuesday.

Kim Loomis, of Pylades Island near Yellow Point in the Nanaimo area, was riding with three other cyclists when she was struck by a panel truck driven by Robert Rathlef of Nanaimo.

Nanaimo coroner Dr. M. J. Smart tentatively scheduled an inquest for Sept. 29.

Ever-Changing Meanings of Words Poses Problem in Bilingual Canada

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

In the small hours of every night while Parliament is in session translaters wrestle the official record, Hansard, into both English and French.

Help is on the way from Victoria.

The problem is languages won't hold still, says Jean-Paul Vinay. They sprout new words and shed others so fast any dictionary is left behind from the day it first appears.

(Module, astronaut and a host of other words arrived with the space age ... perambulator, mackinaw and many others have drifted off).

Then there are the words which change their meanings. (Fond used to mean foolish, stupid. To "table" a report has opposite meanings in Britain and the U.S.)

So the people who assemble dictionaries — lexicographers — can never win. And in Canada, with two official languages, they can be excused for having fits. Because Canadian English and French don't change simultaneously or unanimously.

And if all this isn't enough, English usage (not to mention pronunciation and spelling) in Canada doesn't always match the English of Britain or the United States. And the French of Quebec City has some startling differences from the French of Paris.

The head of Uvic's linguistics department points out that the French words for vest and jacket have opposite meanings in those two capitals.

And the word for overcoat in Paris means snowshoes in Montreal, as the word for slippers in Montreal means socks in France.

Apart from economic or social considerations, with the politics of Canada debated in two languages, rapid and accurate translation is an immediate and practical problem, says Vinay.

What is needed is some central source of bilingual information, one which can somehow keep up to date. A word bank.

There are word banks now, in Montreal and Ottawa, but they have been slow to develop. Vinay and his colleagues, on campus and in Eastern Canada, are working on the two phases of the problem — gathering word information and how to keep up with the country's languages.

With Bruce Kallio of IBM Canada Ltd., Vinay has written a report on the first phase of a project called Lexautom, a study of how words could be coded and retrieved in a computerized bilingual dictionary.

The space an entire dictionary would take in the memory bank of a computer makes the project impractical at present. But Vinay says technology advances will eventually solve this. Meanwhile, smaller computerized dictionaries covering technical fields may come first.

The ultimate system he predicts will be a word bank linked over any distance by telex. The translator dials his query, a code in English or French, the computer sifts its up-to-the-moment memory, and flashes the answer back, in French or English.

Research into computerizing a word bank is apart from the task of up-dating and expanding the Canadian Dictionary, printed in 1962 with Vinay as editor-in-chief.

It is not only bilingual, defining French words in English and English words in French, it notes different usages in five spheres. Vinay explains an English world may have three different interpretations, British, Canadian and American, and a French word, at least two, Canadian and French.

Combing the languages, to discard old words, embrace new ones, establish spelling and pronunciation, will fill the next two years, even with the help of interested students.

Vinay says the great fear of lexicographers is leaving words out. As one form of insurance his team will check every word in a selection of Canadian and European newspapers to make sure the modernized Canadian Dictionary covers them all.

Warning Posted About Red Tide

Signs will be posted today at Esquimalt Lagoon warning the public that a red tide condition could be toxic to clams, a spokesman for the fisheries protection and inspection service here says.

He added, however, that closure signs will not be posted because the laboratory people aren't yet convinced a toxic level exists in the lagoon.

In July, the federal fisheries service had a reading of 44 micrograms per 100 grams, which is a safe level. However, in a circular dated Sept. 7 from the federal fisheries service and received Sept. 10 by branch of the provincial government the reading had shot up to 170 micrograms, which is over the safe standard of 88 micrograms.

Don Wilson, chief of inspection for the federal fisheries service in Vancouver, said that "we don't think there is any hazard involved" at the lagoon.

He said there is reason for concern when sample results of filter-feeding shellfish like clams, oysters and mussels show a reading of more than 200 micrograms.

However, he said that a close surveillance is being kept on the lagoon to see if the red tide condition continues to worsen. "We know that this history of Esquimalt Lagoon goes up and down."

He didn't know whether it had ever gone as high as 170 micrograms.

R. G. McMynn, director of the commercial fisheries for the provincial government, said "we are watching it ... but we don't get concerned until it gets up to 500 micrograms."

McMynn said that at a reading of 170 the lagoon would "only be dangerous if a person ate three meals a day of clams for 365 days a year."

He said that a committee meeting in July involving his department, the federal fisheries service, and the provincial department of health, decided after some disagreement that they would start posting signs around provincial waters informing the public of the danger of red tide.

APPOINTED B.C. representative on newly-formed national port council is W. C. Mearns, 3245 Beach. A former director of the B.C. Power and Hydro Authority, Mearns was chairman of the B.C. harbors board, before being succeeded by Minister of Commercial Transport Frank Richter.

Needless Alarm Feared

He said he himself was opposed to such signs because they would create needless alarm.

The signs, which are scheduled to appear soon, state:

"Clam diggers, beware. In summer, especially warm ones, molluscs (clams, mussels and oysters) may become poisonous to humans. This poison causes paralysis and even death.

"The culprit is a minute marine organism which produces the complex chemical poison. This organism, under certain conditions, blooms or becomes so abundant that it gives rise to the so-called red tide. Molluscs, feeding on the red tide, concentrate the poison.

"Even though a surveillance program is carried on during the summer by fishery and health agencies to forewarn the public, it is impossible to take enough samples often enough to be right up to date.

The bulletin advises clam diggers to always check red tide conditions with the nearest fishery or health official.

"In the case of clams remove the black tip of the siphon or neck before cooking (this is where a lot of the toxin is accumulated in clams). Cook well before eating, don't use the nectar. If symptoms of tingling fingertips or lips occur, induce vomiting, apply artificial respiration if required and get to a doctor."

McMynn said that generally the waters are safe from Nanaimo south, but that doesn't mean it will be so next summer.

Barkley Sound on the west coast of the Island is closed because of red tide.

Usually an area, once it has had a dangerous level of red tide, is closed for a year or more because clams retain the poison from anywhere from six months to two years after red tide has gone.

Q. Can you tell me which is the highest building in Victoria, in stories? Are there any higher buildings proposed for the city?—A.B.

A. The highest building is at 647 Michigan. Called Orchard House, it is 21 stories and was built by Westsea Construction of Vancouver. It is owned by George Mulek of Edmonton. There are no concrete plans for the construction of a higher building in Victoria.

Q. What building is being constructed on the corner of McKenzie Avenue and Cedar Hill Road?—B.J.

A. It will be a frame-construction three-storey apartment building containing 50 suites.

arthur mayse

WHEN MY WIFE AND I came here with our children, Victoria was a comfortable little city that ambled at its own leisurely pace and let the outside world go hang. A bank at Johnson and Douglas and the grain elevator down by Ogden Point were its tallest buildings. The English overtone was strong; the pause for afternoon tea hadn't been replaced by the forenoon coffee break, and cows pastured where suburban shopping centres now stand.

The Second World War had forced a few changes. But population increase remained a mere dribble, traffic was light though antic, and property taxes had no more than begun their determined climb.

To the charmed newcomer who had turned away from the big cities, here if anywhere was the place where time stood still.

I like to remember that Victoria, though not with the longing and the resentment of any change expressed by numerous Old Victorians. Change, after all, is a law of life. It had to come. It was beginning, in fact, when we put down roots here, and it has continued.

There are times, however, when I wonder if it isn't more surface-apparent in boosted population and subdivision spread than in actual depth.

As a city, Victoria remains supremely and stubbornly insular. It is islanded in much more than a physical sense.

It does not take kindly to hustle and bustle, and it remains deeply suspicious of progress as visualized by those who would lift its face and change its ways.

There is good as well as bad in this attitude. It has so far preserved Victoria from much that would have inflicted change at the cost of great harm to its essential quality.

If its apartment buildings have multiplied, it remains a city of gardens.

It has never acquired the honky-tonk atmosphere with which so many cities on the tourist routes are cursed.

And if it has sometimes served necessity grudgingly, it has avoided at least some of the mistakes that a city in the throes of growth might have made. If Central Park was brutalized to provide space for a community swimming pool that should have gone elsewhere, Beacon Hill remains intact.

But the attitude that I've cited does have its dangers, and occasionally time in this city stands altogether too still.

The fault isn't always Victoria's. In spite of lower-level hang-ups and failures to agree, the major delays in implementing needed hospital expansion for this peninsula have resulted from provincial government reluctance to give the go-ahead.

But no senior government can be blamed for other endless-seeming dallyings with projects that should have been pushed to completion, and decisions that needed making.

That swimming pool, the cost of which increased along the way, has yet to open.

Whether you approve the building of waterfront apartment towers or not — and I most definitely don't — the Reid proposal for Inner Harbor development could surely have been dealt with decisively in less than the two years during which it has dangled before Victoria City Council.

The cautious approach is useful only to a point. Sooner or later, this over-slow reaction when a reasonable briskness is indicated will land us in trouble.

I'm not convinced, either, that old ways are necessarily best ways. Perhaps there was a time when Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Victoria proper were better served by separate municipal structures. But is that the case today?

Even though the four municipalities are represented on the Capital Regional District board, each carries on a virtually independent existence. Each makes its by-laws, levies its taxes, elects its aldermen and maintains its own municipal services.

In the past, amalgamation was a bogey-word. To many, I expect, it still is. But I suggest that it's time we took a hard look at what amalgamation might offer in the form of compact, less costly and more effective local government.

The past was good, but we are committed to the present in a city which with growth has acquired new problems. I think we should accept that fact and do more about it.

Dodgers Keep Clawing; Cut Giant Lead to One

BILL WALKER

Louis Leonard sent this postcard from San Francisco, and then Willie Mays did a strange thing. He dropped a fly ball!

Two related items from early summer and late in the National League west pennant race.

Leonard, a former pitcher here, was holidaying down south, and had gone to see Wondrous Willie play. He wanted to tell someone about his hero.

Mays had started his career a trifle later than Leonard, has been at the job longer than almost anybody, and is generally regarded as being fairly accomplished in his art.

Just recently, for instance, he was named baseballer of the last quarter-century by Sport magazine.

Then a short while back, there was Willie Mays on television, and playing first base yet.

Suddenly, there was action afield, and Mays was charging in from first on a foul bunt. But he dropped the ball. Yes, he did. And that shook up the TV announcers. They were unschooled in such matters. Mays didn't drop fly balls. And nobody there could quickly recall when he had dropped the last one.

Then came the official intonement:

"Error, Mays."

In two decades, this hadn't happened too often in the National League. On a throw perhaps, but on a fly ball, an error! But there it was, and the ugly suggestion was that maybe, just maybe, Willie Mays was indeed human.

Then the shocker — and slowing down!

Because after all, here he was on first base — to save those legs. Two years earlier he had been ranked right behind Tris Speaker as the best centrefielder of all time.

And how was he doing in his bid to be the one to tear-down one of baseball's pillars — Babe Ruth's all-time home run record of 714?

"Not very well" is the kindest way to say that Willie is slipping behind the Babe, and may find the elusive target already out of reach.

There may be something else out of reach pretty soon for the Giants if they don't watch out. They've turned belly-up in their pennant battle with the Dodgers—eight losses in eight games—and it would be no surprise if they don't make it into the mini-series against Pittsburgh.

Mays started this season with 628 home runs and high hopes that he might be the one to eventually destroy tradition. He hit a home run in the very first game, and one in each of the next three games. It was a great start. But he didn't follow through.

Since then, Mays' home runs have been few and far between. Even downright scarce. Right now, Willie has only 17 for the year—645 for a lifetime. At 40 years of age, and on the downhill side of greatness, it figures he might be running out of time.

And if he isn't hitting for distance, he isn't swinging as he once did either. In a recent wire story, Tom Seaver of the Mets made the analysis. Seaver was saying that when he first pitched to Mays, Willie could hit a home run off almost any pitch. But now he is selective. He has to get the kind he likes best, high and inside.

Actually, Mays might have been much closer to Ruth, even ahead of him, but for certain factors over which he has had no control. He missed two years of his prime time because of Army service, and he also has had to play much of his career in wind-blown Candlestick Park. No haven this, for the home-run hitter.

But has that made Willie the lesser ballplayer? Never! Because in that very same game, which the Giants finally lost, it was Mays who was giving pitcher Don Sutton of the Dodgers the yips.

Five times, after a base on balls, Mays led off the bag at first; five times Sutton threw to the base; five times the umpire called Mays safe.

Then Sutton threw to the plate. Willie was gone. He was into the bag, and up, at second before the ball got there. He had stolen a base, cleanly. There was no tag.

At age 40, in a non-vintage year, it had to be a touch of that intangible something so often referred to as "class."

Even if he doesn't catch the Babe, which would be a pity; and forget about that dropped pop bunt, too. It may never happen again.

L.A. Wins Eighth in Row In Tense Pennant Race

By The Associated Press

One game separates Los Angeles Dodgers and San Francisco Giants, and from now on, it will be up to the rest of the National League to decide which of them wears the crown.

Or maybe they'll still have to work it out themselves. They've had to do it before—twice in 20 years—and in each case the Giants have come out on top.

But when these two teams collide, it's not just another game.

"It was like a World Series game," Los Angeles manager Walter Alston said after his scrambling, clawing Dodgers won their eighth in a row and 13th in 15 games, stunning the Giants 6-5 on Manny Mota's three-run pinch double in the top of the ninth inning.

It was also their eighth straight triumph this year over San Francisco and gave the hard-charging Dodgers the season series 12-6 against the Giants, who less than two weeks ago commanded what seemed to be an all-but-invulnerable 8½-game margin before losing nine of 10.

"I wasn't discouraged," said the unemotional Alston, referring to the ninth inning, when the Dodgers came up trailing 5-3. "I've been around long enough to know you can't give up too son."

EDITOR: DOUG PEDEN

sports

The Dodgers didn't. They loaded the bases with nobody out on singles by Duke Sims, pinch-hitter Bull Sudakis and Maury Wills, setting up Mota's liner that sailed just inches over third baseman Alan Gallagher's glove, sending all three runners scurrying across the plate.

The two-bagger obliterated the San Francisco lead built on Bobby Bonds' second home run of the game, a three-run blast in the seventh inning coming only minutes after Chris Speier had hit a solo shot which started the rally.

"We threw everything we had at them," a downcast Giants manager Charlie Fox muttered.

'Threw everything we had'

"We got five runs—you'd think we could get three outs in the ninth." They got them —one double and three runs too late.

"Six inches lower and we might have had a triple play," he said of Mota's liner. Then, his gaze turning to a defiant glare, he added:

Mota faced John Cumberland, who had just taken over for Jerry Johnson on the mound.

"I was going to swing on the first pitch if it looked like a strike," he said.

But the game still wasn't over. Sudakis had batted for winning reliever Joe Moeller, so somebody else had to pitch the bottom of the ninth.

Alston called on Hoyt Wilhelm, who was only a year away from the majors when Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Giants staged their first incredible playoff, climaxed by Bobby Thomson's home run that wrote "The Miracle of Coogan's Bluff," the site of the Polo Grounds, the Giants' old home.

Wilhelm struck out pinch-hitter Fran Healy and got Speier on a grounder. But he walked dangerous pinch-hitter Willie McCovey, then Jimmy Rosario ran for McCovey and dashed to second on a passed ball.

That brought up Willie Mays, who was already playing back in that momentous 1951 play-off —and who was, incidentally, the on-deck batter when Thomson homered.

Wilhelm struck out Mays.

Jenkins victim of 13th defeat

Rick Wise of the Phils helped win his own game at the plate, driving in two runs with a single in the five-run second inning that flipped the Cards.

Aaron's five runs batted in with his 42nd and 43rd homers of the season moved him past Stan Musial into fourth place on the all-time RBI list with 1,953, one behind the late Ty Cobb.

He hit a three-run job in the first inning following singles by Felix Millan and Ralph Garr, then unloaded in the fifth after winning pitcher Ron Reed bunted his way on base. It was the 53rd time Aaron has hit two or more homers in a game and gave him 635 career round trippers.

Ron Fairly drove in five runs for the Expos in their opening game romp by Wayne Garrett and Ed Kranepool countered with homers in the nightcap for the Mets. Rusty Staub had one in each game for Montreal.

In other National League games, Pittsburgh Pirates beat Chicago Cubs 4-3 to open a 7½-game East lead over St. Louis Cardinals, who lost 5-4 to Philadelphia Phillies. Atlanta Braves, rode Hank Aaron's two home runs to a 5-2 victory over Cincinnati Reds, Montreal Expos split a doubleheader with New York Mets, winning the opener 12-1 before losing 6-3, and San Diego Padres topped Houston Astros 5-2.

"Now we can start worrying about the Cards," Pittsburgh manager Danny Murtaugh said after his Bucs beat the Cubs on Richie Hebner's triple and a passed ball in the sixth inning, tagging 21-game winner Ferguson Jenkins with his 13th loss.

Bringing attention to streaks of silver on head of Harry Howell (left) is Claude Provost's way of boosting his own comeback hopes with Los Angeles Kings. There are 35 years of National Hockey League experience represented by two of the 58 players trying out with Kings in training camp at Memorial Arena. Howell, 39, will be starting 20 NHL campaign while Provost, who celebrates 38th birthday on Friday, has 15 years behind him. Provost, long-time stalwart with Montreal Canadiens, is making comeback bid with Los Angeles after year's retirement.

Lindsey Gets Starting Shot

But it's a position the 22-year-old rookie wanted to earn, not inherit because of an injury to veteran Jerry Keeling.

"I don't want to play because a guy in front of me and who is more experienced gets hurt," said Lindsey, an outstanding quarterback during his college days with Abilene Christian in Texas.

"Keeling is a lot better than I am right now. Maybe I'll be that good when I get the experience."

Keeling hurt his left hand in Vancouver Sunday against British Columbia Lions. Lindsey took over late in the first quarter and led Calgary to a 25-10 win, scoring two touchdowns himself and completing eight of 17 passes for 137 yards.

MAY PLAY DEFENCE

Calgary coach Jim Duncan says he won't decide until game time whether Keeling will play. The 11-year veteran could find himself in the defensive halfback position where he starred for eight years.

Keeling may replace Howard Starks, who suffered a pulled muscle against the Lions. However, it's expected that Starks will start and Keeling will be held in reserve.

Lindsey was considered too short for the National Football League at five feet 11 inches. With the Stampeders leading the WFC by six points with seven wins and a defeat he is patient and willing to learn, even if he has to sit on the bench.

"I didn't expect to come here and start playing regular quarterback," said Lindsey.

He holds five National Collegiate Athletic Association career records.

At Abilene, Lindsey was the quarterback selected to the 1970 academic all-American team, and won a $1,000 NCAA scholarship for advance study.

He returned the scholarship because he came to Canada.

The Bombers, on a three-game winning streak and tied for second place with Saskatchewan Roughriders, are the only team to defeat Calgary in regular-season play, a 31-15 verdict Sept. 1 in Winnipeg.

Earlier, the Stampeders took a home-field 36-12 victory over the Bombers with Winnipeg's regular quarterback, Don Jonas, on the sidelines.

But the Bombers also have their share of injuries and haven't won a game in Calgary since the 1965 playoffs—that means eight successive defeats.

Winnipeg has lost defensive tackle Ray Watrin, out for the season with a hip fracture, and has activated Canadian lineman Chuck Liebrock. But Liebrock, who broke his leg in a skiing accident last winter, isn't expected to see much action. Frank Reid is likely to move into Watrin's spot.

Go-Karts Roll At Speedway

The Capital City Go-Kart Club is hosting the event which features racing in five classes — rookie sportsman, American Reed light, American Reed heavy, "A" stock light, and "A" open light.

Time trials start at 11 a.m., racing at 12:30 p.m. Further information and registration details are available from Jim Matthews (477-1357).

Castoff Quarterback Gets Another Chance

VANCOUVER (CP) — Quarterback Paul Brothers, cut by British Columbia Lions last week, has packed his bags for Ottawa and a tryout with the Eastern Football Conference Rough Riders.

"I talked to (Ottawa general manager) Frank Clair and (coach) Jake Gotta," he said Tuesday night, "and they assured me I have a good chance of making the club."

Under Canadian Football League rules, he will be on a five-day trial, aiming at the job of Gary Wood, EFC all-star quarterback last year, or Rick Cassata.

After four years of trying to establish himself as the Western Conference Lions' first-stringer, Brothers decided last week to give coach Eagle Keys an ultimatum: Either declare him number one and stop bringing in new trial quarterbacks, or cut him. Keys cut.

"It's a real opportunity for me," Brothers said. "The Riders have some great young Canadians and I think they're a club on the way up."

In Ottawa, Gotta said Brothers at first refused the idea of a five-day trial, then agreed to it.

"He called me and I'm prepared to give him a trial. But I have no plan right now for discarding either of our quarterbacks unless a fellow proves he can do a better job."

The next Rider game is Sunday, against Toronto Argonauts.

Lions, meanwhile, announced Tuesday they had acquired two late cuts from the National Football League who will begin five-day trials today.

One is Ted Wheeler, a six-foot-three, 245-pound offensive guard and tackle from the Chicago Bears and formerly of the St. Louis Cardinals.

The other is Dan Crooks, a five-foot-ten, 195-pound defensive and running back recently released by the Atlanta Falcons. He played last season with the University of Wisconsin.

Injury Risk Of Synthetic Turf Studied

WASHINGTON (AP —) Three manufacturers of synthetic turf for athletic fields have been asked by a congressional committee for an appraisal of its potential for athlete injury.

Chairman John E. Moss (D —Calif.) of the House subcommittee on commerce and finance, requested immediate reports in connection with his panel's consideration of consumer product legislation.

Moss said he was "gravely concerned over a recent study by Dr. Jmes Garrick of the University of Washington indicating that synthetic turf may cause almost 50 per cent more injuries than grass fields."

"Over one million athletes at the high school, college and pro level may be exposed to additional risk of injury if the University of Washington study is correct," Moss said.

Moss said the study found synthetic turf caused additional knee and ankle injuries because of increased friction.

He said studies published in 1965 and 1967 in Rhode Island, Ohio, established that knee and ankle injuries already were the most prevalent serious football injuries.

After One Buys, Another Worries

OTTAWA (CP) — The purchase of Toronto Argonauts by Toronto Telegram publisher John Bassett could lead to the downfall of the Canadian Football League, Ottawa Rough Rider owner David Loeb said Tuesday night.

Speaking to a B'nai B'rith dinner, he said he is "not too worried about the fact that the Riders looked so poor in their loss at Montreal last Saturday night."

"But I'm deeply concerned with the possibility that Canada may lose pro football. John Bassett recently bought 99.5 per cent of Toronto Argonauts and I believe he wants to bring an NFL franchise to Toronto.

"He probably feels Toronto can support two pro clubs but I strongly disagree. Once an NFL team moves into Toronto, the CFL will be through there."

Bassett said in a Toronto interview last week he is not interested in moving into the NFL. But he said that Montreal would be interested in the United States league once it got a new stadium.

"When that time comes, we'll be ready to move too."

Loeb said he sees some encouraging signs for the CFL in recent Canadian government actions.

"There were two compensating and encouraging factors in this respect.

"First of all, the government supported the Canadian Football League in banning cable television of home games and I believe this was done to guarantee the continuity of Canadian football.

"Secondly, the Hamilton turf people were turned down in their request for an elimination of the tax for their artificial turf. I can't believe that the government would reject a $40,000 request of this kind and then subsidize a dome stadium in Toronto to the extent of $20 to $40 million."

Banner Season For Longacres

RENTON, Wash. (AP) — Longacres race track season wound up Monday with the most successful season in history.

During the 81 days of racing, 589,419 persons visited the Renton oval, an increase of 14 per cent. The mutuel handle was up 9.6 per cent with a total of $40,793,639 wagered during the season.

BITTER KARRAS . . . . . BLASTS DETROIT

Yet Another Opinion

DETROIT (AP) — Outspoken Alex Karras, who harassed opposing National Football League quarterbacks and running backs as a defensive tackle with Detroit Lions since 1958, lashed out at the Detroit management Tuesday after the Lions placed him on waivers.

Karras, the most familiar name on the waiver lists as NFL teams trimmed their rosters to the 40-man maximum, was promptly claimed by George Allen of Washington Redskins. Karras said he would let Allen know whether or not he would report to Washington today.

"I cannot believe that the Lions' decision to place me on waivers is based on a fair assessment of my performance on the field," the 36-year-old Karras contended. "There are other factors involved.

"Perhaps there is no room in the world of sports these days for an athlete who has an opinion on anything except his own sport," Karras said, before being claimed by Washington.

"I have opinions. I think I am entitled to the same considerations as other human beings. That includes having the right to express myself on something other than playing defensive tackle," the 6-foot-2, 250-pounder declared.

Karras, suspended for the 1963 season by commissioner Pete Rozelle for allegedly betting on football games, was out for much of last year with a knee injury.

Some of the lesser lights are bounding into the open in the club championship arguments around the district courses.

Reg Effa is one. He defeated co-medallist Pat Cooper to move into the semif-finals at Glen Meadows along with Brian Sluggett, perennial threat Hal Jacobson and Marty Richards.

Sluggett, who shared medal honors with the comparatively-unknown Cooper, faces Jake in one semi-final while Effa goes against Richards as Glen Meadows moves to become the first district club to declare its 1971 champion.

Victoria, Uplands, Gorge Vale and Cedar Hill members turned in their qualifying results at the weekend while the Royal Colwood chase was set back one week because of a conflict with an inter-club meeting with Tacoma's Firerest Club.

Robin Burrell, with a par-matching 70, and Bob Barthy, with a 72, finished 1-2 in the Uplands medal chase. One 80 shooter was drawn in to complete the field of 16 qualifiers in the championship.

At Oak Bay, Dick Stokes took the spotlight away from the "old guard" with a three-over-par 72. The old guard was right behind as defending champion Bill McColl, and three former winners — Dr. George Bigelow, Bruce McFarlane and Doug Munro — came in with 74s. Scores of 80 or better made it safely, with one 81 drawn in.

Youthful Tim Horrigan topped the list at Gorge Vale with 74, one stroke ahead of Rob Ferguson and Larry Palmgren while the major threats, including Dave Mick, Al MacLeod and Mike Kolb, fell in with 76s. It was a tough group of 16 to crack, with scores of 78 or better required.

Gordie Rands took Cedar Hill's medal for the second straight year with a par-matching 65, two strokes ahead of Ron Griffis. Cedar Hill goes without a defending champion since Jim Girard has enrolled at Oklahoma State University.

Kolb enjoyed a hot week. In addition to qualifying easily in the Gorge Vale event, the big guy walked off with top gross honors in a pair of happy commercial tournaments.

Most impressive was Kolb's five-under-60, matching the competitive course record at Cedar Hill shared by Vaughan Trapp and Earl Davies, in Saturday's Associated Commercial Travellers' tournament. Kolb also won low gross honors in the sixth annual Hy's tournament with a three-over par 73.

Harry Yamamoto came up with his second in less than a year, on Cedar Hill's second, while bashful George Crombie connected on the 120-yard second at Parkland's Par Three. Crombie's witnesses were Lyle Riddell, Bill McKinnon and Stan Davies.

Maj.-Gen. A. J. Teddie did the honors on Tuesday, scoring an ace on the 143-yard 15th hole at Glen Meadows.

SHORT CHIPS: Reluctantly, Glen Meadows has decided to cancel its annual Acorn Open, schedule for this Saturday, because of the lack of outside interest . . . Chick Melnyk defeated Gorde Hunter in an 18-hole playoff Tuesday to win low net honors in the Y's tournament . . . The bib goes on tonight at Uplands for the district's junior golfers in a function sponsored by the District Committee . . . Gorge Vale's annual field day, always a fun affair, comes up Saturday . . . Junior girls' champion at Colwood is 13-year-old Sydney Thomson, who made a big mark last month by winning low net honors in the Canadian junior women's tournament . . . Cowichan's Bill Wakeham will be the host pro Sept. 25 for the Village Green Invitational . . . Support from Chopper's relatives is enought to guarantee a big field for that one. . . .

Missed but not forgotten is Jay Dolan's $1,000 victory in the Newfoundland Open at St. John's last weekend . . . Dolan had a first-round 77, then camt back with a course record 63, seveen under par, and finished up with a 73 for a 54-hole total of 213. . . . He finished one stroke ahead of Victoria's John Morgan and Herb Holzscheiter of Ashburn, Ont., who pocketed $600 apiece . . . City women's champion Dale Shaw will be idle for about a month . . . She's scheduled to undergo a minor foot operation. . . .

Comeau Emerges As Playoff Leader

Goalkeeper Joe Comeau played a large role in helping New Westminster Salmonbillies capture their second straight Western Lacrosse Association playoff crown and a berth in the Mann Cup final.

Comeau, who took part in six post-season games, stopped 199 of 245 shots for a spectacular .812 average to lead all playoff goaltenders.

Wayne Shuttleworth of Coquitlam Adanacs, who won the regular-season scoring race with 61 goals and 82 assists for 143 points, again topped the ladder with 45 points on 24 goals and 21 assists during 10 games.

Clubmate John Allen was closest to Shuttleworth with 19 goals and 19 assists for 38 points.

Dennis Somner led Victoria Shamrocks, last-place finishers in the regular schedule, with six goals and 11 assists for 17 points during the semi-final against Coquitlam. Mike Beaulac led Irish scorers with 10 goals in the series.

Timid Substitute Caught in Hurry

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — No. 2 ranked heavyweight George Foreman chased timid Vic Scott of Los Angeles, Calif., through the opening minute of the first round, then quickly knocked him out with a hard right cross to win his 29th professional fight without a loss.

Scott, who weighed in at 218 pounds, flew into El Paso less than an hour before the fight as a replacement for Foreman's scheduled opponent, Al Banks of Dallas, Tex.

Banks developed car trouble in Hobbs, N.M., while en route to the fight.

Games Plans Go Smoothly

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau of Montreal outlined today for members of the International Olympic Committee the foundations laid so this city may successfully play host to the 1976 Summer Olympics.

A copy of his progress report to the IOC members gathered in Luxembourg was released through his office here.

The report was of a preliminary nature and did not deal with any financial structures or elaborate on such subjects as what type of stadium will be built. Instead it outlined the organization that has been built since Montreal was awarded the Olympics by the IOC at its Amsterdam meeting May 12, 1970.

The stadium would be erected on city-owned property in the east end, Drapeau said.

Officials of the International Sports Federations involved have inspected existing sports facilities and "found them to their entire satisfaction."

DISCUSSES COMMITTEE

Drapeau outlined the 10-man organizing committee, set up "with the consent and co-operation of the Canadian Olympic Association."

The committee includes Harold Wright of Vancouver, president of the COA, Jim Warrall of Toronto, Canada's member of the IOC, and Drapeau. Pierre Charbonneau of Montreal, president of the Quebec Sports Confederation, is the 1976 Games co-ordinator.

Drapeau said a commissioner-general for the Games will be appointed before the 1972 Summer Olympics open in Munich, West Germany.

He said the committee had studied various types of Olympic Stadiums in the United States, Mexico and Europe.

It also had studied the press and information facilities used in Munich, Mexico City, Tokyo and Rome, as well as other international events.

ACTS AS OBSERVER

Gerald Simond, athletic director of the University of Montreal, and a member of the COA's technical committee, had acted as Montreal's official observer at Munich. Simond travelled across Europe making surveys of other sports events of international stature.

The organization of the Kiel Sailing Competitions in Germany had also been studied.

"For such purpose," Drapeau said, "the city of Kingston, Ont., where the sailing competitions will most probably be held in 1976, recently sent a team of 12 experts to Kiel."

Drapeau said the Montreal committee will send a delegation to Munich before and during next year's Games there. It will be made up of at least 50 experts and technicians. The committee will send a similar team to the 1972 Winter Olympics at Sapporo, Japan.

The committee will continue its campaign to encourage official sports governing bodies to schedule as many world championship events and major sports in Canada to "provide opportunity for us to prepare adequately for the 1976 Games."

"All these programs will be inspired by our sincere will to preserve the human dimension of the Olympic Games, based on greatness, dignity and simplicity," Drapeau said.

Hughes Heads Refs

Don Hughes was elected president of the Victoria Soccer Referees Association for the 1971-72 season at the organization's annual meeting Monday night. Elected to the position of vice-president was John King, while Ken Baggot was voted in as secretary.

Avery Continues to Hum Simon-Pure Tune Loudly

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, raised his voice louder than ever Tuesday in a renewed pledge to purge the Olympics of every hint of professionalism.

The 83-year-old United States administrator opened the 71st session of the IOC in the Municipal Theatre of Luxembourg.

His speech marked the start of what will probably be his last year in office. He has said he will not seek re-election after the Olympics at Munich next year.

Controversial issues before the four-day congress include an invitation to Rhodesians to compete at Munich, using the British national anthem and the Union Jack, and a move to bring communist China into future Olympics.

Brundage made no mention of these explosive issues but merely spoke out on his old theme — the need to keep the Olympics purely and completely amateur.

Brundage said that in the last year he had visited the sixth Asian Games in Bangkok, the Moscow Spartakiad and the 1971 Pan-American Games at Cali, Columbia, and noted at all three events the growing popularity of sports.

"One cannot go anywhere in the world," Brundage said, "without finding interest in and enthusiasm for the Olympic movement and respect for the International Olympic tronized these Games and kept them clean, pure and honest.

"It is refreshing to find an enterprise where all have an equal opportunity to be the best man, instead of the favorite of the local political boss, where there is no discrimination and where they find a spirit of friendly international co-operation . . ." he said.

"This accounts for the popularity of the Olympic movement and the enthusiasm of its universal reception, and why it is becoming the most important social force in the world today."

However, he admitted the Olympics are getting too big and too expensive." We regret that, despite this, we will find three sports added to the Olympic program next year."

The three new sports scheduled for Munich are archery, handball and judo. The IOC congress here is to consider cutting some sports out of the program.

Sound Organization Softball's Big Need

OTTAWA (CP) — Softball is moving into the international big leagues and the Canadian Amateur Softball Association has plans to try to make it to the playoffs.

Softball already is set to be an official part of the Pan-American Games program at Santiago, Chile, in 1975. The CASA intends to bid to have softball considered for the Olympic Games in Montreal a year later.

Larry Skinner, association executive director, Wednesday enthused about the prospects following what he termed "the finest Canadian men's championship ever held" last month in Halifax.

"As one of the 43 countries linked under the International Softball Federation," he said, "Canada will play a major role in bidding for inclusion of our sport on the 1976 Olympic Games agenda in Montreal.

"We've been playing softball in this country for many years, but everything has been disjointed.

"Talent we have in abundance. The organization has to come along to match it."

And he said, "Finally we've established some standards and hopefully we'll surge ahead."

WILL HAVE BOOK

He explained that in 1972 for the first time a national rule book will be available in both French and English, every aspect of the game will be made standard for both men and women across the country and a complete minor league classification system will be established.

And just as important, the association will be affiliated with the various provincial and regional umpiring groups in an attempt the make uni form rules interpretations, financial structures and umpire development.

"What this means," he said, "is that Canada can develop umpires who will be capable of officiating on a national, international or world basis.

Mauch's Contract Extended a Year

MONTREAL (CP) — Jim Fanning, general manager of Montreal Expos, announced that manager Gene Mauch's contract with the National League club has been extended through the 1973 season.

Mauch's contract was to run until the end of 1972.

"We are making progress that we feel is the right kind of progress," Fanning told a news conference. "We don't think we have the best manager in baseball, we know we have the best."

NEW YORK (AP)—A record 3,811,858 persons, an average of 49,505 a game, turned out to watch pre-season pro football, the National Football League announced Monday. The same 78-game exhibition schedule last season, including one twin-bill, drew 3,496,782 or 47,254 a game.

Czech Marvel Upsets Ashe

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP)—Jan Kodes, the clay court sharpshooter, zeroed in on a big gun of grass, Arthur Ashe, killing the hopes of an all-American United States Open title match today.

Kodes, the 25-year-old Czechoslovakian darkhorse of this $160,000 classic, upset the third-seeded player from Richmond, Va., 7-6, 3-6, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 in a light drizzle Tuesday for the right to meet Stan Smith for the $10,000 first prize in the rain-delayed finale today.

Ashe's bid for his second Open title—he also won in 1968 — went down the drain when referee Vic Seixas declined to suspend the match, already delayed by three days of downpours, because of a mist that marred Ashe's spectacles.

"If I wear glasses, that's just my bad luck," said the disappointed Ashe.

The university graduate entered the tournament unseeded and unnoticed, having never gone further than the second round in a grass court event.

DISLIKES GRASS

The Czech clay-court specialist said he plays on grass only twice a year — at Wimbledon and at Forest Hills.

"Playing on grass is a joke," he said early in the tournament.

BEATS OKKER

Smith, seeded No. 2, moved into today's wind-up with a 7-6 6-3, 3-6, 2-6, 6-3 triumph over fourth-seeded Tom Okker of The Netherlands.

But both the $7,500 cheque and the crown will be at stake in the women's final between top-seeded Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., and No. 2 seed Rosemary Casals of San Francisco.

Mrs. King, who won the crown in 1968, earned her finals berth by sidelining teenage sensation Chris Evert of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., 6-3, 6-2 Friday— after the 22-year-old Miss Casals eliminated fourth-seeded Kerry Melville of Australia 6-4, 6-3.

Uvic Athletes Face Busy Day

Although regular league competition has not yet started, some University of Victoria athletes face a diversified day of sporting activities following their first week of classes.

And all action is slated for Saturday.

Charlie Thorne and Larry Corbett, both outstanding Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association runners for vic last season, will be participating in the first B.C. League cross-country race of the season.

The two-mile women's run begins at 12:15 with the six and one-quarter mile men's race starting five minutes later from the playing field adjacent to Centennial Stadium.

Among the promising freshmen entered in the competitions are Rob Ross, a graduate of Oak Bay, and Eva Van Wouw, from Ontario.

Both Uvik Vikings and Uvic Norsemen of the Victoria Rugby Union's first division face exhibition clashes with Vancouver Kats on the new University pitch.

Norsemen battle their Kat counterparts at 1 p.m. with Vikings set to take the field at 2:30.

Valkyries and Vagabonds, both first-dvision teams in the Vancouver Island Ladies Field Hockey Association, will be participating in the second annual Bunyan Trophy tournament at Windsor Park.

This pre-season tourney involves five teams from each of the VILFHA's two, divisions in a round-robin style battle.

Valkyries, which finished third in the first division last season, have also entered the WCIAA tournament at the University of British Columbia, Oct. 15 and 16.

Island Girls On B.C. Team

Nine players from the Vancouver Island Ladies' Field Hockey Association will be on the British Columbia representative squad which will play a touring side from Wales in Vancouver's Brockton Oval on Thursday.

Game time is 5:15 p.m.

The B.C. team will leave Friday for the three-day Canadian championship tournament starting Saturday in Calgary.

The plain facts about Allstate Fibre Glass belted tires:

1. They give you better traction: wide, low profile, deep tread design lasts long and gives tire excellent road hold.

2. Fibre glass belts prevent tire "squirm," thus tire will last up to twice as long as ordinary unbelted tires.

3. Easier handling with the wider tread and the low profile. Now, big price cuts make it easier than ever for you to switch to these proven belted performers.

Allstate Wide Guards and Snow Guards have proven they're worth every cent you pay. *Proven in almost two years of trouble-free service on thousands of Canadian cars.

GUARANTEED THREE WAYS

1. Every Allstate passenger tire is Guaranteed against ALL tire failures for the life of the tread—regardless of the cause of failure. Replacement cost based on tread used, prorated against current price. 2. Nail punctures are fixed at no charge. 3. Guaranteed against tread wearout for specific number of months. If tire wears out anytime before guarantee expires, the following discount allowance off the current price will be given towards a replacement.

Federal Employees Awarded Pay Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — An arbitration tribunal has awarded pay increases of up to 20 per cent over three years to 35,000 clerical and regulatory employees of the federal government.

The award, announced Wednesday, provides that pay increases of up to eight per cent be retroactive to Oct. 1, 1970.

The retroactive portion, double that offered in collective bargaining by the federal treasury board, will mean lump payments ranging from $267 to $661.

The award was greeted with approval by the Public Service Alliance representing the workers.

The treasury board made no immediate comment.

"I think we have to be realistic and admit that in terms of pay for these levels this is a good award," said Alliance vice-president William Doherty at a news conference.

LOST HOURS DEMAND

He stressed the award will also be important for its effect on bargaining now underway on behalf of another 35,000 office and administrative employees.

The only disappointment for the Alliance was the rejection of its demand for a reduction in the work week to 35 hours from 37½.

The decision was accompanied, however, by a suggestion from tribunal chairman Mr. Justice Andre Montpetit of Montreal that the issue be reviewed by all employee groups and the government.

Mr. Doherty said a return to the 35-hour work week would likely be discussed by the national joint council of the government and its employees' unions. The shorter work week used to apply in the federal administration before 1951, he said.

Rail Safety Study Asked

OTTAWA (CP) — A Canadian National Railways spokesman asked the Canadian Transport Commission today to set up a special committee to find solutions to railway safety problems.

CN counsel Howard J. G. Pye made the call at the final argument session of a railway safety enquiry launched by the CTC last September.

He said the special committee should include representatives of the railways, labor groups and the commission. The committee would be able to continue the co-operative effort existing at the commission's enquiry.

Mr. Pye said the committee could review the Uniform Code of Operating Rules, CTC orders and procedure for carrying dangerous commodities.

NDP Seeks Provincial Secretary

VANCOUVER (CP)—The executive of the provincial New Democratic Party will soon be taking applications for a provincial secretary and the current secretary says he considers himself fired. Hartley Dent said Tuesday he may appeal the executive decision to the NDP provincial council, which meets Oct. 2 and 3.

The decision to end Dent's term Dec. 31 and appoint a new secretary at the first of the year was taken at a closed meeting Sept. 2.

The executive passed a motion confirming Dent in the job — which he has held since August, 1970 — until the end of the year. But the motion called for advertisements for applications Nov. 15 to take the job Jan. 1.

WELCOME MAT OUT FOR DOGS, CATS

EDMONTON (CP) — Dave Patterson decided business at one of his apartment buildings was alittle slow so he ordered two public washrooms built on the building's lawn. Business is booming.

Actually, the two "washrooms" are fake fire hydrants designed for the canine population in the apartment building, one of the few in the city which allows pets.

One has a pink sign with a white poodle saying "Ladies only" and the other has a blue sign with a German shepherd saying "Boys only."

"The building's policy changed in April to allow cats and dogs," said Mr. Patterson, general manager of Alldritt Apartments Ltd. "We have to make them feel welcome."

He said the firm had an exercise area built — one way of controlling the animals and "avoiding accidents."

"We've had no complaints and I'll bet you the building is the only one with more than 100 suites that's full in the city."

Individual Rights In Ad Ban Sought

VANCOUVER (CP) — A lawyer for Robert Malkin has written Attorney-General Leslie Peterson recommending an amendment in one section of the Tobacco Advertising Restraint Act which would remove any doubt of an individual's right to press charges.

Malkin has asked for an injunction to stop the T. Eaton Company from selling magazines containing tobacco ads.

Lawyer David Freeman, acting for the Vancouver Magazine Service, contended when the application came up in court that it should be dismissed because the writ which launched the action did not show that any right held by Malkin has been breached.

He said that the principle if well established in Canadian law that an injunction of this type will not be granted unless it can be shown that the applicant's right has been affected.

CP Rail Blamed

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg's Metropolitan Corp. decided Tuesday to bill the Canadian Pacific Railway for about $1,000 to cover costs of cleaning up an oil slick Sept. 5 on the Assiniboine River.

The slick was traced to CP Rail's Weston yards in the city's west end.

A similar oil slick occurred in April when waste from the Weston was flushed through sewers into the river.

Pub Proposed

CALGARY (CP) — Governors at the University of Calgary approved a scheme Tuesday to establish a permanent tavern on campus.

The Alberta Liquor Control board also has to give its approval and in the past has only consented to allowing liquor at specific events on the university grounds.

The tavern would be established in the students' union building with profits to be held in trust for building expansion.

The governors also decide to seek a permit allowing alcoholic beverages to be served in the dining centres.

Spines Injured

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Spinal manipulation has a place in medicine, but it sometimes causes injury to the spine, Dr. Michael Livingston, a general practitioner from Richmond, B.C., said today.

He told delegates to the College of Family Physicians that he has kept records on spinal injuries seen in his office during the last three years.

"A total of 676 patients with pain, possibly of spinal origin, were examined. Of these, 172 had visited a chiropractor at some time and 12 of these received an injury."

Jobs Open

CALGARY (CP) — A shortage of skilled workers in some fields has left Canada Manpower unable to fill all positions, says district manager Ray Huey.

To ease the shortage, the Calgary office has asked skilled workers to consider coming from other cities and some employers are training unskilled personnel.

"But the skills in short supply appear to be common to all Western Canada centres at this time of year. Other areas report similar conditions exist in meeting their local manpower demands."

Workers are needed who are skilled stucco and cement masons, automobile and diesel mechanics, autobody repairmen, boiler welders, power linemen, waitresses, short-order cooks and housemaids.

A 17 YEAR OLD BOY IS DEAD BECAUSE HE THOUGHT HE COULD FLY.

SOME TRIP!

Doctors and nurses can tell you about them. So can kids lucky enough to survive. Kids who thought they could fly or were invisible to traffic. Kids who discovered more than they bargained for when they took a "trip" on LSD, turned violent on "speed", or went into a coma from an overdose of heroin.

Every year, kids die or are physically or mentally crippled because they don't know what drugs can do to them or won't listen when they're told. If you're a parent, you owe it to your children to be informed. If you're a teenager, you owe it to yourself.

Life's too precious to waste on drugs.

Remember When Jerry Was Dean's Comic Instead of a Writer?

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jerry Lewis, author?

The comedian himself was surprised when Random House proposed that he produce a book about his film theories. Don't write it, he was told—talk it.

That was easy for him. He took a half-million feet of audio tape from the film class he conducts at the University of Southern California and compressed it into a 208-page book, The Total Film-Maker.

The result is typical Jerry Lewis—frenetic, profane, disconnected, and yet fascinating in what it reveals of this unquestionably talented film maker.

He tells how he became a movie director:

"I had this drive and I was curious. Of course, I was already a Jewish movie star and that helped get me on the lot. But in front of the camera, acting like a movie star. Not behind it.

"Then one day at Paramount, long ago, I was missing. They found me crawling around up on a catwalk over the sound stage. I had to know if the catwalks, where the electricians and grips do things and sleep, were made of two-by-fours. Were they built on a temporary basis? How did they hang them?"

LED BY CURIOSITY

His native curiosity pushed him through every studio department until he learned everything he could absorb about filming. Then he had to direct. And write, and produce.

The most valuable part of the book to ordinary readers is his section on comedy. Particularly his comments about fellow comedians:

Bob Hope—"Has little competition at stand-up comedy . . . depends on character more than visuals."

Lenny Bruce—"The most infuriating man I ever met in my life because he preferred to make his way with four-letter words."

The great comedians, according to Lewis: Chaplin, Laurel, Jackie Gleason, in that order.

Lewis' film career has been in a slump lately, as has all movie business. But he remarks in his book: "Whatever direction the industry takes in this time of change, I won't abandon comedy."

By DAVE STOCKAND

VANCOUVER (CP) — One wisdom once shared by all Orientals living in British Columbia was that the scales of injustice could come crashing down on them like a ton of bricks.

Too often, that was exactly what happened.

In the perspective of B.C.'s 100th birthday celebrations this year the winding down of officially sanctioned prejudice proceeded at the pace of a Chinese water torturer working to rule.

Only in the late 1940s was the process finally completed.

In the early days, racism's kettle was always on the boil, bubbling over into terrorism and mob violence in a brew of myth, misunderstanding, callousness, deliberate indignities and petty and not-so-petty harassment.

The Chinese got their first lumps in the gold rush year of 1858, before the province was born; even earlier if you count the brief Chinese presence at Nootka Sound in 1792, soon after Capt. James Cook had put the Vancouver Island harbor on the map.

For the Sikhs, who had ventured into an alien and hostile environment from the Punjab in northern India, there are memories of their countrymen bottled up aboard a sweltering hell-ship in Vancouver harbor in the Komagata Maru incident of 1914.

JAPANESE UPROOTED

Mass-forced relocations is the memory of the Japanese—the uprooting of 23,000 of them from the coastal areas of B.C. in the panic days following the 1941 Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

On Ottawa's orders—but at B.C.'s prodding—these people were herded into abandoned mining towns in the interior or, even farther away from the coastal conscience, to work in the sugar-beet fields of Alberta or Manitoba.

All pressures for drastic action carried a made-in-B.C. stamp simply because that's where the Japanese in Canada were; outside of B.C., the Japanese constituted only scattered hundreds in the other provinces, dwindling down to just scores as the population map worked eastward.

But in B.C. there were these "alien" 23,000—6,727 of them Canadian-born and another 7,011 who had taken out Canadian citizenship. The time-of-emergency head count turned up another 16 who were citizens of the U.S.

Geography was the loaded fortune cookie that made B.C. the focal point of the "Oriental Question" in Canada and its festering results. British Columbians were not unique in their racial attitudes but, by and large, they had more fresh arrivals to practise them on.

MANY REASONS

The unfamiliar was one source of the antagonism: the Chinese with their pigtails; the Sikhs with their long hair and turbans; the Japanese who were put in double jeopardy because they were considered arrogant as well as industrious.

Certainly the watershed point from the perspective of racial conflict was the relocation of the Japanese in the wartime year of 1942.

Unintentional ironies are what stand out in reading, nearly 30 years after the event, the report of the British Columbia Security Commission which was set up by the federal government to handle the forced evacuation.

On the commission of three were one businessman and two policemen, assistant commissioners of the RCMP and the B.C provincial police.

Their report makes notes of initial measures dealing with the Japanese: registration, confiscation of fishing vessels, and then seizure of all Japanese-owned automobiles, weapons, cameras and radios.

PUBLIC STIRRED UP

The government of Canada, it goes on, took no further definite action "until public sentiment became inflamed and the members of Parliament from this province became so vehement in their denunciation, and the press so vociferous in its expression of indignation. . . ."

"Finally, faced with the necessity of establishing some security against possible attack from within as well as without" the commission was created through order-in-council.

In a pitch for other provinces to accept the Japanese booted out of B.C., the commissioners expressed the view it would be the height of economic folly to allow large numbers of men and women of the Japanese race—"many of them either Canadian-born or naturalized"—to remain in comparative idleness in the ghost town camps.

None of the commissioners was in a position to know, of course, that the war would end with not a single act of espionage or sabotage ever discovered to have been committed by an American or Canadian Japanese.

First on the scene, the Chinese were under siege the longest. Even the early unfortunates at Nootka Sound were in for a disappointment.

Capt. John Meares, who brought them to that lonely outpost, said he would fetch wives for them from the Hawaiian Islands but he was unable to keep his promise.

The Nootka Chinese disappeared in one of two ways. Either they were assimilated through intermarriage with the Indians or they were massacred by them, and most historians lean to the latter theory.

The city of Vancouver was the scene of anti-Chinese riots as early as 1887 thanks in part to agitation by a group known as the Knights of Labor, an early foe of the Chinese in California.

According to contemporary accounts, the attackers drove all but five Chinese laundrymen out of the city.

TEST ORDERS

The Komagata Maru affair in the spring and summer of 1914 was an all-Sikh show.

The Komagata Maru was a Japanese vessel chartered by a man named Gurdit Singh, variously described as a militant Indian nationalist and as a Punjabi agitator, to test the validity of orders-in-council barring Sikh immigration.

Aboard her were 376 would-be residents who, barred from landing, sat aboard the ship in Vancouver Harbor week after week with conditions deteriorating rapidly and starvation threatening because the shipping company was no longer providing rations.

Finally immigration officials and police acted and, using the tugboat Sea Lion, made up a boarding party that was supposed to transfer the passengers to the Empress of India for transportation to Hong Kong. Instead, a miniature war broke out.

In the words of Vancouver writer Eric Nicol:

"The police had orders not to use firearms. The doughty Sikhs on the other hand had had two months in which to whittle driftwood into clubs and stockpile garbage of truly overwhelming repulsiveness.

"Her decks awash with rubble, the Sea Lion was forced to beat an ignominious retreat, to the jubilation of the East Indians, some of whom were apparently under the impression they had defeated Canada's combined armed forces."

ENDED IN WHIMPER

In the end, the incident ended with a whimper. Arrangements were made for the departure of the ship and its passengers after a committee of local Sikhs took over the ship's charter and received assurances from the government that compensation would be considered for the expense involved.

In the long haul, changing attitudes were bound to benefit the Oriental population and the glacial pace of the past—at least one step backward for every two forward—speeded up dramatically in the years following the end of the Second World War.

Although the wartime exclusion measures against the Japanese were kept in force until April, 1949, and although many of them had lost everything they owned when their possessions were auctioned off at fire-sale prices, the Oriental generally was on his way to equality of citizenship.

Such was the clean sweep of progress that the province's native Indians got the franchise along with the Chinese and Indians in 1947 and the Japanese were added to the voting rolls two years later.

For the Sikhs, the slate was really wiped clean when—in 1948—a law requiring the fingerprints of East Indians on legal documents was revoked.

Mayor Likes Bennett Offer

PORT COQUITLAM, (CP) — Mayor Jack Campbell wants to take Premier Bennett up on his offer to have the provincial government pay half the salaries of people hired off welfare rolls.

He said he will present a full report by the end of the month and will ask council's approval to use the plan to increase city hall staff, adding:

"At the present time we have 103 recipients classified as employable and the city should hire at least five of these. I think this would be a very humane thing to do and it would only cost the city about $7,000 over a six-month period."

There are lots of orange juices and drinks on the market and many of them are very good, but we sincerely believe that Woodward's Frozen Florida Orange Juice is the very best you can buy. There is a lot of technical data about 'pulp' and nutritional content but what it simply means is that there is as much or more pure, good orange juice packed in Woodward's Supreme than any other brand. It comes in a convenient 'zip Top' can too (actually it's not a can but an easily disposed of cardboard container with aluminum ends that totally resist corrosion). There are two sizes, the larger 12 fl. oz. size makes 48 fl. ozs. and sells for 39c, the 6 fl. oz. size makes 24 fl. ozs. and sells for 4 tins for 79c.

Study on Highrise Living for Elderly Reveals Lonliness, Isolation, Fear

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

"I would have given anything to have someone come in and make me a cup of tea."

This lonely statement comes from an elderly lady in a public housing unit who lay ill in her apartment for three weeks without a visitor, too afraid or too shy to ask for company.

Another 250 senior citizens, most of them with time on their hands, live in the same building. But because of the peculiar influence of the highrise apartment on its inhabitants, they don't get to know one another.

"I don't even know the people on this floor."

"Everyone stays pretty well to themselves."

These were some typical answers from inhabitants of the subsidized highrise for the elderly when asked what sort of community activities they participate in.

The city is Hamilton, Ont., where recently a study on highrise living was conducted, but it might be Victoria in a decade or two, when galloping land prices have wiped out low-density living for all but the affluent. Not the highrises that take up priceless waterfront or parkside land, containing lavish suites, shops, common rooms and other luxuries.

The highrises the elderly pensioners will be shuffled into, like those in Hamilton, will be the bare-bones minimum in decent habitation, unless architectural breakthroughs or financial windfalls intervene.

FAMILY SECTION

The first example has already reached Victoria. It towers above the corner of View and Quadra, a slab of limited-dividend concrete no brighter than the crumbling commercial structures below.

And first indications are that the elderly people, for which the apartment was built, are more than pleased with their new accommodation, with rents that don't exceed $127 for a one-bedroom suite.

But as the years roll on, will its inhabitants and others similar begin to react to their special environment as did the people in Hamilton?

Some experts answer a definite yes. The famous Vancouver architect, Arthur Erickson, has said that elevators in highrise apartments disorient people.

"To lose all contact with the ground creates an artificial situation, and people go through neuroses because of this disorientation . . . We really need a garden, too, some change from the apartment itself.

"It isn't good to come home to an artificial cell, never changing, with the same view, the same light. Even a small garden has a change of seasons, change of light, new patterns, the move from inside to outside."

The Hamilton study, conducted by an old age pensioner-student, named Morris Silbert under the surprising auspices of the federal Opportunities For Youth Fund, came to similar conclusions after interviews with 120 occupants of apartments in the city's publicly-aided housing for the elderly.

The woman who had no one to bring her a cup of tea, the woman who was dead four days before she was found — these are possibly extreme examples of what the lonely corridors of apartment blocks can do.

The significant findings of Silbert's study were the indications that as time wears on in a highrise apartment filled

Two Views On Apartments For Aged

By ANN DUNSMUIR
Times Staff

Anyone willing to give up pets, parties, gardens and heavy antique furniture will probably like living in a highrise apartment.

Most tenants feel amenities like heated pools, saunas and hydro-therapy baths make up for restrictions on personal freedom.

Mrs. Edith Hilliker, 67, lives alone on the 21st floor of a Michigan Street highrise. She chose her present home because of the view and the outdoor, heated pool.

Mrs. Hilliker is asthmatic and has to choose her living quarters to ameliorate her condition. She loves to swim but has to use an outdoor pool. Indoors, the chlorine fumes bring on an attack of asthma.

She finds highrise living helps keep her free from asthmatic symptoms because she is above any air pollution.

"Some mornings I look down and can't see anything. The whole downtown area will be socked in by smoke from that awful thing in the Gorge," she said.

"The people who say there is no air pollution in Victoria should come up on the roof here some morning when there has been no wind. You can't see a thing. There's no excuse for it in a city like Victoria," Mrs. Hilliker said.

She doesn't find apartment living lonely.

Mrs. Hilliker has made several good friends in the building since she moved in less than a year ago.

"We have a lot of fun together," she said. "I wouldn't go back to a house. If something goes wrong, I pick up the phone and call the manager — it's his worry not mine."

Mrs. Hilliker is glad to be rid of the worry and work involved in owning a house.

"At my age I don't want to wash windows and look after a garden. I like to be free to come and go. With an apartment you can lock the door and leave on a trip without worrying about details like lawns or vandals."

House of Anne Frank Has Financial Problems

AMSTERDAM (AP) — The memory of Anne Frank still flourishes, but the house that sheltered her from the Nazis is battling financial difficulties.

A severe monetary crisis led last year to talk of closing down Anne's refuge in the Second World War.

There was more talk of closure this spring, but now there are hopes that No. 263 Prinsengracht will overcome its money problems and continue as a mute symbol of reproach for the Nazi extermination of six million Jews.

With courage, gaiety and idealism beyond her years, the Jewish girl, hardly into her teens, recorded the life of the house in a diary discovered after she and the other inmates were betrayed Aug. 4, 1944.

They were sent to concentration camps in cattle trucks on the day the Allies liberated Brussels. Of the eight Jews taken from the house only Otto Frank, the father, survived the war. Anne died in Belsen.

Visitors Increase

The house was opened in 1960 as a museum and public memorial. The annual stream of international visitors has steadily increased.

The house gets about two-thirds of its income from voluntary support, and it posted a $5,000 deficit in 1970.

A foundation maintains the house, provides the staff and operates some 40 annual seminars on such themes as oppression, intolerance and racial prejudice. It faces the delicate question of raising funds without appearing to seek too much.

"We don't want to exploit the memory of Anne," says Hans van Houte, the foundation's 48-year-old director, "but we do have to make provision for the future."

Every year the house with all its activities needs about 300,000 guilders or $83,000 to operate. More than half goes to the seminars, which also receive a 60-per-cent government subsidy. The foundation must try to cover the balance through annual pledges, donations from visitors, bookshop sales and nominal attendance fees for the seminars.

This year, the house decided to experiment with admission charges.

with elderly people, the inhabitants see their children and friends less, spend more time in front of the television, are less active and spend more time at "home."

The findings may have surprised even those who granted the interviews, because 77 per cent of the people considered their highrise homes better, or much better, than their former dwellings.

With more time spent in the dwelling, Silbert says, "life within its walls becomes increasingly important.

"Yet there is little evidence that strong community exists or is evolving. The idea is prevalent that this is just another apartment building where everyone must mind their own business."

Silbert found the recreation rooms "far too small to serve more than a token percentage of the residents." Ninety per cent of the residents did not even want to become friendly with others, and Silbert found many "indicated a fear of getting friendly with their neighbors."

Arthitectural details had a significant bearing on the residents' well-being. As indicated by architect Erickson, outdoor space for each apartment is crucial.

Not all the residents interviewed by Silbert had balconies, and many felt wronged because of it. Through some inexplicable oversight, many windows were too high to allow the resident a view of anything but the sky.

Further complaints stemmed from the curved, graded car ramp a resident had to climb to reach the front door of the building.

When ice or snow appeared, the elderly people, unsure of their footing, would stay indoors to avoid a fall.

Unthinking administrative procedures resulted in unhappy tenants. When a milkman was allowed twice a week to commandeer one of the two elevators in a 266-suite building, tenants were frustrated in simply trying to step out of doors.

Tenants who were arbitrarily assigned to apartments without balconies found later that they were not even allowed to move to a balconied suite when one became vacant.

The overall finding of the study was that in construction, administration and design of this housing, there was an "almost total lack of recognition" that elderly people required a special kind of service.

Instead, the "evidence of isolation, independence, and minding one's own business came through strongly as virtues encouraged by management."

"This has led to a situation where an individual can lay dead for four days, where another can lay ill for weeks unattended, while all about are good people who are unaware and afraid to get involved."

After the first flush of ease and convenience wears off in Victoria's experiment in highrise living for elderly pensioners, will a full contentment take its place?

Or will the building gradually become nothing more than 357 individual units, where each tenant will spend more and more time independent, isolated, minding his own business?

$740.00 richer. Mrs. Barbara Robinson of 4105 Borden Avenue, Victoria, named Viteway Bakery and Organic Foods as the Business of the Day on C-FAX, sponsored by the stores with the "D" on the doors in Downtown Victoria, and won $740.00 Downtown Shopping Dollars. Mrs. Landie of Viteway is presenting Mrs. Robinson with her winnings.

She bought a chafing dish so she could cook a meal during such am emergency and has a good supply of candles.

"I think I could hold out until they fixed the break," she said.

Mrs. Hilliker thinks highrise apartments bring luxuries like "a fabulous view and a swimming pool" within the reach of ordinary people.

"You'd have to be very rich to afford a house with luxuries we have here at a reasonable rent," she said.

On the other side of the picture, Mrs. Jack Roberts, 345 Chester Street, doesn't want to "be concreted in someplace."

Mr. and Mrs. Roberts live in a white stucco bungalow on a 135 by 60 foot lot that was "jungle right up to the door" when they moved in 10 years ago.

The "jungle" is now one of the best kept gardens in Fairfield, where Merv — a pampered cat — can climb apple, pear, plum or cherry trees, or sleep in the flower beds.

"I have to have my home, my garden and my cat," Mrs. Roberts said.

She would hate to give up her home and move to an apartment.

"As long as we can crawl around we'll keep the house," she said.

East Pakistanis Voice Feelings

LONDON (AP) — Reflecting events 7,000 miles away, the Sher-e-Punjab restaurant has become the Bangla Desh.

The renaming was a gesture echoing civil war in Pakistan. Bangla Desh is the name of the movement in East Pakistan rebelling against rule by the central government with headquarters in West Pakistan.

This has torn apart the 150,000 Pakistanis who live in Britain. About 40 per cent came from East Pakistan.

The restaurant proprietor, Wathid Ahmad, says:

"I wanted to make clear where my sympathies lie. We have had no trouble since changing the name. As far as I know no West Pakistanis come in here. I would not serve any."

Other restaurants have made similar gestures. Many have carefully deleted the work "Pakistani" from menus. They now list "Indian and Bangla Desh dishes."

Syed Anifuddin, a West Pakistani and president of the League of Overseas Pakistanis, says a wide gulf has opened up between himself and some of his countrymen.

"I have a people who were once colleagues and friends of mine in voluntary social organizations," he said. "We got on perfectly well for 15 years but now we avoid each other. We find we have nothing to talk about."

Mohamed Ullah, a 44-year-old truck driver, says the cold war extends to schools: "Children from East and West do not play with each other between lessons. You see, we are still very close to our motherland. We get letters from our families and we are sad and worried. It is as if we were living there instead of here."

Many plan to return to Pakistan and have no wish to settle permanently amid the strange customs and uncomfortable climate of Britain.

Though most Pakistanis share the same Islamic faith, there has always been a cultural difference between them. The Westerners are Urdu-speaking, the Easterners speak Bengali.

Pooling resources, two single fathers now share housekeeping duties.

THEIR SIX CHILDREN ARE ALL HAPPY

Single Fathers Join Forces To Solve Lonliness, Isolation

MONTREAL (CP) — Two Montreal fathers think that they have found a practical solution to the problems of the single-parent family.

Mike, a 28-year-old technical writer, and Don, a 34-year-old electronics technician, both divorced, each have three children.

And raising an energetic group of six youngsters ranging in age from six to 11 is quite a job.

"It gets a little noisy around here sometimes but we're used to it," Mike says. "Besides, the children get along well. Usually their only squabbles are the pillow-fights they have every night."

The fathers take turns doing the shopping, housekeeping and laundry. Until the children went on a short summer holiday with their mothers, they had a housekeeper who gave them their lunch and took care of them after school.

"We'll need another housekeeper," Don says. "But the neighborhood babysitters help. And the children pitch in with the dish-washing, table-setting, lawn-cutting and so on. They'll have to learn anyhow sometime."

Occasionally one father takes his children away for the weekend, giving the others a chance to have the house to themselves. The whole group often goes on outings together such as a recent camping trip to an island when "they got us up at 4:30 in the morning clamoring for breakfast."

Loneliness, finances and a need to be accepted in community life were the three major problems of the single-parent family cited in a 1966 survey by the Vanier Institute for the Family.

Don and Mike's arrangement, however, seems to have solved two of these problems: They are not lonely and don't feel segregated from community life.

As for finances, the survey recommended special tax exemptions, subsidized housing and low-cost day-care, and guaranteed annual incomes or higher family allowances as three ways of helping single parents.

Because Don owns the house, they are not interested in subsidized housing or outside daycare.

They are in favor of higher allowances, however. At the moment they get about $40 a month for each child from the federal government and about $105 every six months from the provincial government.

"Even a special tax exemption would help defray the cost of hiring a housekeeper," say the two men. "And we've also got to think of the cost of educating the children."

Finance Minister Benson's good news for these men is that as of January, 1972, they will be able to deduct $500 per child under 14 to a total not exceeding $2,000.

Mike and Don do not claim that it is easy to be a single parent. But they do think that their solution to the problem is good and definitely practical.

Employees, Companies Like 'Chequeless' Plan

NEW YORK (UPI) — There has been a lot of talk about a moneyless and even a chequeless society. We've seen credit cards bring about somewhat of a moneyless society. But few believed that a chequeless society, one in which the worker doesn't even see his cheque, would come about.

It has in several areas.

The 1,300 employees of the Sarasota (Fla.) Memorial Hospital haven't received a paycheque since January of 1967. Not that they work for nothing. Four and one half years ago the hospital instituted a "chequeless" payroll system for its entire $280,000 bi-weekly payroll force. And it seems to be working.

While the Sarasota Hospital is believed to be the only business establishment to adopt such a system 100 per cent, the Indianapolis plant of the Detroit Diesel Allison Division, a General Motors operation, has tried it on a voluntary basis. Since September of 1968, 39 per cent of that work force, about 3,000 employees, have opted for having their cheques deposited rather than picking them up from a cashier.

Allison, which produces turbine and helicopter engines and heavy duty transmissions, says it is "happy with the results" and the system is getting "smoother every day."

A telephone conversation with H. Jack Floyd, associate executive director of the 515-bed hospital in Sarasota, and three of his fellow workers, indicated the system also is working well there.

"We're committed to it," said Floyd, "because it saves us about 25 per cent in payroll preparation costs and the employees like it."

That was confirmed by Mrs. Joey Keener, clerk in the hospital's business office. Mrs. Mary Burchell, registered nurse, and Albert Collier, housekeeping supervisor.

"I like it," said Mrs. Burchell. "There's never any question about 'losing your cheque, and there's new privacy — no one ever sees the cheque. It also is easy to write the cheque and pay bills as they come due. The money is always there, and credit reference, with a bank account, is easy to establish."

"That's right," said Mrs. Burchell. "You don't have to come in on your day off now to get the cheque. It's deposited for you."

Collier likes the new system because the money is on deposit rather than waiting for him in a cashier's drawer. "You also have an easier time cashing cheques against a company's deposit than you do in terms of a personal cheque," he said.

Each employee is issued an identification card with his name, picture and social security number when he joins the staff. When he comes to work, he inserts the card into an electronic time clock. It records the time and social security number and transfers the information to an automated card puncher in the computer room. The process is repeated when the employee leaves work. At the end of the pay period, the computer prepares a payroll roster for each of the 14 banks participating in the program and the payroll is delivered to the various banks with the hospital's cheque.

"We had some complaints about dehumanization when it first went in," said Floyd. "One nurse said she didn't like being forced to deposit her cheque even though that's what she would do with it anyway.

"But it's worked well ever since and we aren't thinking of changing."

Floyd said the savings in payroll money and time is just too big to think of switching. An added advantage of the computer system is higher collections on outstanding bills. While most hospitals are running a debt rate of up to 10 per cent, the Sarasota hospital is around 2.5 per cent "because the computer kicks out the problems as they develop," according to Floyd.

Choir Encourages Boys To Be 'Good Citizens'

elizabeth forbes

It was on a September day in 1950 that members of a Victoria Rotary Club boys' work committee met to decide on a project for the year.

When suggestions were invited, Frank Shandley, then singing with the Orion Club (oldest male voice choir in Canada), brought up the idea of a boy's choir.

It wouldn't work, he was told. Boys were keen on sports and in the age group he suggested (10 to 21), they would not be interested in singing.

Went Ahead

Shandley stuck to his guns. There were boys, he said, who were not athletically inclined. They needed something to interest them, just as much as the one who went in for sports.

Finally he was given the "go ahead" signal.

He recruited a committee of interested Rotarians, including Brig. Clifford Milley of the Salvation Army, Lionel Huxtable, Ralph Cruickshank, Jack Conway and Tom Walker.

Bill Hasting was named choir conductor and Mrs. James (Helen) McVie, the dedicated accompanist.

At a first practice in the old YMCA building on Blanshard St., 14 boys turned out. As word got around, however, that number quickly jumped to 80. Enough to form two choirs.

22nd Year

This coming Saturday night at 6:45 p.m., in the new YM-YWCA building at the corner of Quadra and Courtney Streets, at a first weekly practice of the season, Victoria (Rotary) Boy's Choir, enters its 22nd year as an active group.

At least 50 boys will be out for that practice. Bill Hastings will be there as conductor. Helen McVie is still the pianist.

Somewhere in the background you'll likely find Bill Thomson, this year's chairman of the boy's committee and, of course, Frank Shandley, who has not missed many practices in the 21 years.

It is Shandley who still guards the choir's register of names. He keeps in touch with the boys and acts as manager when the choir "sings out" at various times in and around Victoria.

Talk to him for a moment and he will tell you that over the years, 1,506 boys have sung in this choir.

Come Down

"Any boy 10 years of age or over is eligible. All they need do is come down to a practice or get in touch with one of us."

Several of the first boys are now members of the Orion Club. One John Allan is a professional on stage in London, England. Another, Bill Richards, a Campbell River teacher has organized and is conducting a mixed school choir of boys and girls.

Still another, Ron Cuzner, now living in the United States, has his own male boy's choir.

Shandley tells you with a reminiscent chuckle that not all who have been in the choir started out with singing voices.

"Indeed most of them had no idea how to sing. But once they got the hang of it, you couldn't stop them. And none has ever wanted to leave the choir.

"Right now we've got four boys attending UVic (among them Mrs. McVie's younger son, John). They turn out regularly for practices."

Over the years the choir has always been willing and ready to sing for any worthy cause. It's quite usual in a year to hear it in at least eight concerts.

Welcome Customers

On three mornings prior to Christmas, its collective voice, raised in song, welcomes customers at a downtown department store at 8:30 a.m.

A Christmas day concert (recorded two weeks ahead) is broadcast by a local radio station. And until a few years ago, the choir sang early each Christmas Eve in a downtown hotel lounge.

Also for many years, a Sunday afternoon of song was presented each June, in the Cameron Bandshell, at Beacon Hill Park.

Belief Strong

A Rotarian now for 47 years, Frank Shandley is strong in his belief that the 21-year-old choir is one of the shining stars in Victoria Rotary Club's crown of service.

"It not only teaches boys to sing. It also encourages them to be active in community efforts and in general, to be good citizens."

DEAR ABBY...

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are in our mid-thirties, so don't get the idea we are a pair of old fogies when you read this.

Our problem is another couple with whom we go out at least once a week. The man has been our good friend for many years. His wife died two years ago and now he is going with a woman who seems to have changed him. He used to act like a perfect gentleman, but not any more. He carries on in public with this girl — kissing, hugging, smooching and what not. This they do in front of children, in restaurants, in the bowling alley, at the beach. Anywhere at all. They act as if they are all alone.

I suppose you could say, "They're in love," but Abby, that's no excuse for bad manners. We have hinted, but it hasn't worked. We would hate to end our friendship with this wonderful guy, but his behavior is just too embarrasing. What do you suggest? — Good Friends.

DEAR FRIENDS: Quit hinting and tell loverboy to knock off the love scenes in public. And if he doesn't, simply put the friendship in cold storage for a while. P.S. He'll be back. This affair is too hot not to cool down.

DEAR ABBY: What would you say about a man who goes to church every Sunday and can never tell you what the sermon was about, but he can tell you what everybody wore? — Wondering.

DEAR WONDERING: I'd say he's better at looking than listening.

DEAR ABBY: I have an 11-year-old son and a 10-year-old daughter. Last week I came home from the store and found the boy dressed in his sister's clothes. I was so mad I made him sit on the porch so everyone could see him. After about an hour I called him in and asked him why he did it. He said because he wanted to see how he would look dressed as a girl.

Abby, now my daughter tells me her brother has been after her to let him wear her clothes. She has told him no, but she knows he has worn them anyway while she wasn't around.

Now my daughter is setting his hair and he likes it. I am getting confused because he makes a prettier girl than his sister, but I don't think he should be encouraged in this, do you? Will he outgrow it in time? Please help me. He has no daddy. — Troubled Mother.

DEAR MOTHER: Get in touch with your local mental health clinic and make an appointment for your son. Boys should be boys and girls should be girls, and the tendencies to be otherwise are rarely outgrown.

DEAR ABBY: Our son is married to a woman who is obsessed with the belief her family is superior to ours because her ancestors supposedly came over on the Mayflower.

This claim has been pounded into our grandchildren, and they have been taught to look down on us because we are foreign-born and speak with an accent.

It is ironic that due to hard work and thrift we own our own home and have helped our son and his snobbish wife buy theirs, while her supposedly aristocratic parents have never achieved anything for themselves, nor have they helped their children financially.

We are sick of hearing about their pure American heritage. Abby, please set some people straight about who the real Americans are. American, But Foreign-Born.

DEAR AMERICAN: I thought everyone knew technically the only real Americans were the American Indians. And if you want to read an authoritative, well-documented book on American history from the Indian point of view, get "Bury My Heart at Wounded Knee," by Dee Brown.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Church Booklet Says Abortion 'Unjust'

TORONTO (CP) — The law governing abortion is inequitable and puts responsibility in the wrong place, says a committee of the United Church of Canada in a booklet called Abortion released today.

The booklet, prepared by a joint committee of the church's board of evangelism and social service and the board of women, elaborates on abortion resolutions adopted by the general council of the United Church at Niagara Falls, Ont., last January.

The introduction says the booklet is intended primarily as a guide for clergymen in counselling women.

The booklet says the inequality in the present law concerns the hospital committee system.

"The criterion for deciding whether a woman should be granted an abortion is inevitably subject to a wide variety of interpretations, which often depend more on personal attitudes to abortion than on medical judgment.

"Another serious injustice is the extreme inequality of access to hospital committees: The law discriminates against poor and less determined women, and especially against those who do not happen to know a sympathetic gynecologist, or who live in smaller communities."

Rev. A. G. A. McCurdy, associate secretary of the board of evangelism and social service, said the position of the church is that abortion "should be a private matter between a woman, her doctor, and hopefully her partner."

TORONTO (CP) — Three-year-old children will attend two publicly-supported schools in Toronto next year if the board of education and the Ontario government agree on a proposal of the board administrators.

The program would be experimental.

The board administrators propose that 60 pupils attend the schools during the first year and have asked the board for $21,000 and the education department for $54,000.

Parents would be involved in weekly seminars and act as classroom assistants.

Inquest Next Month In Fire Fatalities

DUNCAN — Coroner Thomas Lines said today an inquest into the death of two infants in a house fire early Tuesday will be held in mid-October.

Robert Gabriel Jack, two, and his three-year-old sister, Patricia Pauline, were found dead together in their bed after their home on the Cowichan Indian Reserve on Tzouhalem Road was gutted.

Police believed the fire was started by a cigarette on a couch.

Mrs. Jack's four other children, Della, six, Joseph, eight, Justine, 10, and Marie, 11, were at school at Port Alberni at the time of the fire.

Co-ordinator of the Red Cross emergency relief service, Mrs. Pat Mullins, delivered bedding and clothing to the family Tuesday afternoon.

Adieus Made Scientists Set To Watch Blast

VANCOUVER (CP) — A farewell party with rock music and dried salmon for treats was held Tuesday night for the crew of the Greenpeace, making final preparations for the start today of their protest mission against the proposed five-megaton nuclear blast in the Aleutian Islands next month.

The 12, including scientists, plan to cruise off Amchitka Island just outside the three-mile territorial limit on the day of the blast to take air and water samples unless it is cancelled by U.S. President Nixon.

Jim Bohlen, a co-founder of the Don't Make a Wave Committee, said the 80-foot Canadian halibut boat will sail inside the 12-mile prohobited zone, "but what we do when we are there is up to Nixon," who is under pressure to cancel the test.

Twelve 500-gallon tanks were lowered into the ship's hold Tuesday to carry enough diesel fuel for the return trip.

"We're not taking any legal chances," Mr. Bohlen said "such as putting into an American port for refuelling and risk being arrested."

SUPPLIES ABOARD

The ship's galley is already crammed with meat, vegetables and other provisions — enough to last the 12 about six weeks.

Sleeping quarters on the ship are tight, with 10 bunks built into a small compartment that is full of scientific and radio equipment, sleeping bags, lifejackets and personal belongings.

Dr. Lyle Thurston, 34, a North Vancouver physician, is going along. Another crew member is Pat Moore, 24, a graduate student of resource ecology at the University of B.C.

Others are Terry Simmons, 25, a graduate student at Simon Fraser University who will act as legal adviser on board the craft; John Cormack, the ship's captain; engineer Dave Birmingham, 56, of Nanaimo; and scientists and writers.

$2,000 Grant Called Too Late To Stop Further Flooding Damage

By DONNA CLEMENTS

DUNCAN — The Cowichan Indian Co-Operative Farms' Association has received a $2,000 federal grant for flood control — too late to stop the loss of more farm land this year to the raging Cowichan River.

Association chairman Norman Joe said Monday that last year the group lost at least five acres of land when the Cowichan overflowed.

Joe said the only way to reach the land isolated by the flooding would be to build a bridge which would be expensive.

"We will lose more land this year because it is too late to stop the river from overflowing again," Joe said. "Just from the last couple of rains the river has risen at least five inches and the Crofton pulp mill will be releasing water from the Cowichan Lake soon and it will be virtually impossible to stop the flooding."

RELEASE LOGS

Joe said if the Indian affairs department money had been allocated earlier the association would have overcome some of the major problems causing the flooding.

Now, he said, they will just have to try to release some of the log jams in the river in an attempt to ease the flooding of valuable farm land.

Joe said the association appealed to the department for assistance in early summer.

"They said they would check into funds but we never heard any more," he said. "I phoned Vancouver last week and found out that there is about $2,000 available for flood control but it is already too late for this year."

Joe said they have already requested $10,000 to combat the problem for next year.

"If we don't take drastic steps and keep pressuring the department through the band council and the association we could lose a lot more valuable land," Joe said.

JOE
. . . five acres lost

The 10-member co-op was formed four years ago when the Cowichan Indian Band Council and other band members decided to develop land that had become overgrown with brush.

Some of the farmland had been leased to non-Indians who were just taking the crops from the land and not working it.

Since that time Joe said association members have been building the land up through fertilizers and other methods.

300 ACRES

Although association members started operations with 200 acres of their own land, they now have over 300 acres. They have leased land from other band members. Eventually, with river control, Joe said they hope to lease another 200 acres.

Their main crops are hay and grass, which is sold mainly to local farmers, and thornless blackberries which are bought by Grower's Wine in Victoria.

Experiments are being carried out on a five-acre section where 21 different varieties of grapes are being raised. Within two years the co-op hopes to supply grapes to Grower's Wine in Victoria as well.

CREATING JOBS

Joe feels the project has been very productive. It is creating employment for some of my people during the berry-picking and hay harvest seasons as well as weeding time," Joe said. "Most of the profits go back into the association."

Joe said the association receives about a $10,000 allotment annually from the department for operational purposes.

The money comes in instalments and with the last payment being late, Joe said it would mar the project because most of the money is to pay for the leased land.

"This could be detrimental to the project because some of the people may not let us work the land if they are not paid," Joe said.

"I have been in touch with the department and have received no explanation as to why the money has been held up. They said the money is there and said would be coming soon — that could be a long time."

RELATIVES DELAY DEATH REPORT

Dead Woman Is Driven Home

DUNCAN — Although 41-year-old Catherine Jim died in Washington while travelling by car, her family obeyed her dying wish and drove her back to Duncan before turning her over to authorities.

An inquiry has been ordered into Mrs. Jim's death. RCMP here said Tuesday that they are awaiting results of an autopsy but it is suspected she died from Addison's disease — a form of tuberculosis.

A spokesman said Mrs. Jim died on the way back from Washington Saturday and the group continued on to Duncan.

"They said that they wanted to carry out her last wish to be taken back to Duncan," he said.

The group consisting of: Horace Jim; her mother Mildred Jim, and two brothers Marvin and Oscar; Irma Bell; and Ethel Jimmy, all of the Tzouhalem Reserve, were returning from Alderton, Washington, after berry picking. They stopped at Auburn and Everett when Mrs. Jim became ill.

Upon arrival in Duncan they left the woman at the Hirst Funeral Home where employees then called the police. The woman was taken to Cowichan Hospital and pronounced dead.

Catherine Jim, who had lived in the Quamichan district all of her life, had knit Cowichan Indian sweaters for the past 15 years.

Is Apartheid Crumbling At Last?

By KENNETH L. WHITING

PRETORIA (AP) — Rigid patterns of racial separation seem to be changing—on the surface—in segregated South Africa.

The first black ambassador is in residence. There have been multi-racial official lunches in Johannesburg and Pretoria city halls. An integrated track and field meet is planned. A black United States congressman who criticizes apartheid gained entry on an unrestricted visa.

"A South African coming home after some years away could easily be forgiven if he got the impression that this is not quite the place he used to know," commented a Johannesburg newspaper.

Malawi's president, H. Kamuzu Banda, paid a visit in response to South Africa's announced policy of cultivating links with willing countries in black Africa. He repaid a visit made by South Africa's prime minister to Malawi last year.

Joseph Kachingwe, newly accredited as ambassador from Malawi, told reporters that his country opts for "persuasion by example."

" . . . Isolation is not the way to get South Africa to change its policies."

White and Negro visitors from the United States and black and white South Africans lunched at the two city halls under the auspices of the U.S.-South African Leader Exchange Program.

"I've lived in this city 51 years and I have never been inside the building, let alone eaten a meal here," one skeptical African told an American white at the Johannesburg function. "When we leave after lunch you and I won't be able to ride away in the same bus. . . .

"We wouldn't be allowed to sit down and eat together at any public restaurant in this city."

LOWERS SPORTS BAR

Ousted from the Olympic Games and ostracized at other world sports events, the government reacted by punching a few holes in the sports color bar.

Prime Minister John Vorster announced in April that non-whites could compete directly with whites in "international class" events. Australian star Evonne Goolagong, an aboriginal, became the first non-white in the national tennis championships that month.

A track meet open to non-whites from home and abroad was scheduled for Pretoria in November. The competition was switched to Cape Town when a Pretoria city councillor commented "a mixed sports event in Pretoria could easily result in a bloodbath."

Most South Africans are keen sports fans.

The All Blacks rugby team from New Zealand visited last year with Maori and Samoan players. A French rugby squad with a star West Indian named Roger Bougarel ended a successful tour in June, prompting one newspaper to note: "Now his visit is over and there have been no vengeful catastrophes or scramble of sisters to marry black men and the sky is where it was before. Next please."

LAWS UNDERMINED

The basis structure of apartheid, or "separate development" as it's officially known, remains intact despite the surface changes. However, a serious shortage of skilled and semi-skilled white manpower is undermining laws which set aside the best work and wages for the white minority.

More and more Africans, Asians and coloreds, those of mixed ancestry, steadily infiltrate "white" jobs. The government often turns a blind eye but officials insist that the interests of white workers come first. Thus no white, no matter how inexperienced or matter how educated or expe- orders from a non-white, no ill-suited, has to work or take rienced.

Traffic Victim Not on 'Walk' Jury Rules

A 88-year-old pedestrain was not in the Bay-Wilson crosswalk when he was fatally injured by a car Sept. 2, a coroner's jury ruled Monday night.

Harold Henry Smith, of 1323 Coventry, died Thursday in St. Joseph's Hospital as a result of complications arising from a broken hip and pelvis suffered in the accident. He was struck by a car driven by Leonard Lancaster, 58, of 1127 Wychbury, Esquimalt.

The victim "presumably failed to yield the right-of-way to the motorist, due to inattention and physical defects," the jury found.

Grits Using One-Speaker-Plan on Tax Bill Debate

By TOM MITCHELL

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberal government apparently is planning to use one speaker a day in its bid to get its whopping new tax bill through the House of Commons as quickly as possible.

The speaker-a-day approach, stressing such attractive points ast he dropping of a million Canadians from the income tax rolls, appears to be the strategy the Liberals are adopting. For the rest of the day, they seem content to let opposition members do the talking about the many other facets of the huge bill.

This pattern became clear in the Commons Tuesday, second day of full debate on the tax package.

Colin Gibson (Hamilton-Wentworth) was the only Liberal speaker Tuesday. His message was that opposition MPs should stop their "gloom-and-doom" prognostications and pass the bill so that Canada could enter a new era with a reformed tax system.

The only Liberal speaker Monday, first full day of debate on the massive bill, was Revenue Minister Herb Gray. He stressed the government contention that a million citizens would be cut from the tax rolls, that 4.7 million would have their taxes reduced and another two million would find tax levies varied less than one per cent.

OPPOSITION TALKING

Outside of these speeches, the opposition has been doing all the swinging. The Liberals apparently are leaving it up to the public, as umpire, to decide whether they are making hits or whiffing.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said Tuesday his party is going to stay at bat as long as necessary to make the government answer the real questions facing the Canadian people.

That pitch that the bill would take many lower-income Canadians off the tax rolls would not work, he said, because the rest of the bill appeared to create more problems than it ever would solve.

The bill provides for increased personal income tax exemptions and a generally lower rate of corporation income taxes. But it also would introduce a capital gains tax, on stock market profits for example, and would include in individual income for the first time such things as employer contributions to medical care insurance programs and payments from unemployment insurance.

Mr. Stanfield said it is not enough for the government to propose reductions at the lower end of the income scale. Given the problems of the Canadian economy, it was obvious that there had to be tax reductions across the board to put the country back on the road to economic growth.

The bill would increase basic income tax exemptions to $1,500 from $1,000 for unmarried taxpayers and to $2,850 from $2,000 for married taxpayers.

EFFECT TEMPORARY

Mr. Stanfield said this would have only a temporary effect. It was the first change in years in the exemptions although the cost of living had been climbing without letup.

There should be immediate removal of the 11-per-cent federal sales tax on building materials, he suggested, plus a comprehensive winter works program to alleviate expected heavy winter unemployment.

Ed Broadbent (NDP—Oshawa-Whitby) said the bill would do little for the 20 per cent of Canadians who collared only seven per cent of the country's total income. Many of them went to bed hungry.

But the bill would continue the long-established Liberal tradition of coddling those industries extracting non-renewable Canadian resources and selling them at "exorbitant profits" and refusing to hit the rich.

Compare this with the man "just eeking out an existence" on $100,000 a year, who would save $5,423 under the new basic exemptions.

"Some reform that is."

nanimous" provision in the new bill for carpenters, plumbers and other salaried workers to deduct up to a maximum $150 a year for work-related expenses. But corporation directors, advertising men and other professionals would still be able to write off $150 a night for entertainment, while enjoying themselves with their clients.

This was "sheer hypocrisy."

WAIT WORTHWHILE

And, though Christmas would come a little late this time— Jan. 1, 1972, instead of Dec. 25, 1971—for the relatives of the wealthy, the wait would be worthwhile, Mr. Broadbent said.

Because on Jan. 1 the federal estate tax would disappear and millionaires—he said there are 1,000 in Toronto alone—would be able to pass gifts to their children scot free.

Millions of low-income Canadians would continue to be taxed while millionaires were given an unprecedented tax break. This was typical Liberal government thinking, the NDP member said.

David MacDonald (PC—Egmont) said the fact that the government had tied the whole tax measure up in one ball of wax showed that it wasn't trying to be understood. It was attempting to confuse and mystify.

The bill would do nothing if it took a million persons off the tax rolls while another million found themselves unemployed because of other developments.

There was no account taken in the tax measure of the drastic changes in the United States, and a million people off the tax rolls but unemployed would not be much of an asset to the country.

John Lundrigan (PC—Gander-Twillingate) said the reason government spokesmen were shunning the debate was that they were perpetrating a form of blackmail. By throwing out some token easements to low-income Canadians, they hoped to dangle this as a carrot that would make the country swallow the rest of the tax package.

Cigarette Use Cut

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Columbia University says it has found in a United States-wide survey of youngsters that those who use marijuana are less likely to become cigarette smokers than those who don't.

The university's school of public health said Tuesday its survey covered 1,701 youngsters in the 12-to-17 age bracket from all sections of the U.S.

Of the surveyed adolescents who have used marijuana 10 times or less, 83 per cent are cigarette smokers. Cigarette usage fell to 64 per cent among those who have used marijuana 60 or more times, the New York City school said.

"Apparently, if you smoke pot a lot, who needs cigarettes," said Dr. Eric Josephson of Columbia, who reported on the survey at a conference on student drug use.

STUDENTS ESTEEM 'MAMA' MAFIA

ROME (AP) — "The Mafia is like a mama, and since I, too, am a mother's son, I respect it."

So said a Sicilian teen-ager in response to a questionnaire by Italy's anti-Mafia commission on students' attitudes toward the outlawed secret society. A total of 2,166 high school students in western Sicily answered the survey, and many showed varying degrees of esteem for the Mafia.

"My uncle killed his wife for kissing another man," one student said. "Must I consider him a Mafioso?

"Very well. But I would have done the same thing. There must be a special law for men."

Another student said: "The Mafia must be considered as a state within the state, a sort of third house of the parliament."

"To get a job in Sicily you need two pieces of paper," another student told the commission.

"One, which does little good, is a graduation diploma. The other, which is indispensible, is a note of recommendation from some Mafia bigshot."

A summary of the students' replies was made public in one of the parliamentary commission's periodic reports on its seven-year investigation of the society which has its hands in patronage, politics and profits.

The names of the students questioned were not disclosed in Sicily, where loose talk about the Mafia can be dangerous. But one student was quoted as saying:

"Here's an example. When the nephew of Uncle Giuseppe walked into class at the start of the term we all knew he'd get the best seat. And at the end of the term he'd be promoted with the highest grades." Uncle Giuseppe is a Mafia boss.

Heroin 'Big Wheels' Live Free in France—Charge

PARIS (Reuter) — Who are the men who run the French end of the multi-million dollar international drug racket?

John T. Cusack, European regional director of the United States bureau of narcotics and dangerous drugs, says there are "three or four big wheels," who because of their wealth, contacts and respect surrounding them, live in impunity in Marseilles.

The French Mediterranean port is widely considered to be the transformation and transit point for most of the heroin used in the United States.

The French police, obviously stung by the charge, say Cusack later denied to them having made the statement. But the French reporter who interviewed him last month stuck to his story, and Cusack himself was unavailable for comment.

Although Cusack's charge hit a sensitive spot and set off a raging controversy in France, his reported statements on the involvement of the Marseilles underworld in the heroin traffic cannot have surprised the French police.

Several magazines and newspapers have charged that bigtime drug pedlars in Marseilles enjoyed political protection—an accusation echoed this week by some customs agents working in the Mediterranean port.

BEGINS IN TURKEY

The whole problem of how the traffic got started, and why Marseilles is such an important link in the chain, begins in the Turkish poppy fields.

Most of the heroin consumed in North America comes from Turkey, where peasants grow opium-producing poppies.

Because the Turkish farmer does not get much money for the opium he sells legally, which is used to produce medicine, narcotics agents say he sells part of his crop illegally — at about $80 a kilo.

The opium is then transformed into a morphine base, which, unlike opium, is odorless and thus easier to transport.

The morphine base, now worth about $400 a kilo, is then smuggled into Marseilles, usually aboard ships but sometimes in cars or trucks travelling overland.

Once past French customs agents—who are reported to have only two boats to patrol the whole Mediterranean, including Corsica, from the Spanish border to Italy—the morphine base is taken to a secret laboratory somewhere in the Marseilles area.

DIFFICULT TO LOCATE

The laboratories are not elaborate installations. They can be set up in a basement, a house, a flat, practically anywhere with running water. All that's required is a kitchen stove, distilling equipment and acetic anhydride for the morphine, which is heated at 260 degrees.

Once changed into pure heroin, the original kilo is worth about $5,000. Then it is exported —smuggled into the U.S. or Canada—and its value goes up to about $10,000. In the U.S. the kilo is sold to American wholesalers for $20,000.

The original amount of opium, now pure heroin, is then cut with lactose to make 20 kilos, worth about $400,000 when retailed on the street.

Multiply each kilo by 4,000—the number of kilos Cusack estimated reached U.S. addicts from France in 1970—and it is easy to see the kind of profits to be made in drug smuggling. No other criminal activity is so lucrative.

In his interview with the Marseilles newspaper Meridional last month, Cusack said Heroin leaving Marseilles is smuggled into the U.S. once a month. Each time it brings $10 million back to the top executives in Marseilles, who have the money sent to Swiss bank accounts.

Paintings Recovered

VENICE, Italy (Reuter) — Five Renaissance paintings stolen from a Venice church a week ago and valued at about $3.5 million were recovered by police today.

Police Chief Salvatore Barba said the pictures, two panels of a Tryptych by Giovanni Bellini and the whole of another by Bartolomeo Vivarini, had been found on an island in the Venice Lagoon.

The paintings were taken from the huge Catholic Church of San Viogannia a Paolo.

The theft came barely a week after a unique Titian masterpiece was stolen from a church in the painter's birth place of Peve di Cadore in the Venice area.

RUDE RECORD GOES ON AIR

LONDON (CP) — ITV, a commercial network, has agreed to broadcast a rude hit record banned by the BBC. Thedisc, Leap Up and Down, Wave Your Knickers in the Air, goes out on one condition — members of the St. Cecilia pop group cannot appear jumping up and down waving their knickers in the air.

Pesticides Used on Fruit Trees Linked to Cancer in U.S. Study

WASHINGTON (AP) — A family of pesticides widely used on fruits and vegetables has been linked to cancer in animals by the United States Food and Drug Administration.

Spurred by the FDA findings, the Environmental Protection Agency is considering whether a ban, or lesser restrictions, should be imposed on some or all of these fungicides known as carbamates.

No decision has been reached, said Dr. William M. Upholt, EPA's deputy assistant administrator for pesticides programs. He said there appears to be "no clear-cut evidence of imminent hazard to man" from the carbamates.

Dr. Virgil O. Wodicka, director of the FDA's bureau of foods, wrote Upholt Aug. 23 that agency scientists had confirmed that the chemical ethylene thiourea causes cancer of the thyroid gland when fed to rats. A copy of the letter, which was not made public, has been obtained by The Associated Press.

TRACES REMAIN

Traces of carbamate, and presumably ETU, remain on treated fruits and vegetables purchased at food stores, Wodicka said, although the extent is unknown.

"The whole thing is too new" to evaluate the risk, Wodicka said in an interview. "If we find it's a problem, we will speak in a louder voice."

Meanwhile, two scientists reported that chemicals used to make bug-killers work better may extend their effect to humans.

In a report prepared for a meeting of the American Chemical Society, R. M. Philpot of the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences at Research Triangle Park, N.C., and Ernest Hodgson of North Carolina State University, cautioned against using so-called "synergists."

It has been found, they said, that synergists render inactive a substance called cytochrome P-450, which helps destroy many foreign compounds.

"These may be insecticides in insects or such things as drugs or food additives in man," said the report.

"In view of this newly-found interaction, and since we know that it occurs in mammals as well as insects, there is new ground for caution about the use of synergists in a widespread way," Hodgson commented.

The report did not say how widespread is the current use of the pesticide-synergists and it did not assess any possible impact on human beings.

CANADIAN EXPORTS STILL RISING

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian exports to all countries rose to $1.42 billion in August, reflecting increases in sales to the United States, Latin America and the United Kingdom, Statistics Canada reported today.

The August figure was 17.4 per cent higher than in August last year, and brought the cumulative total of exports for 1971 to $11.61 billion, up 4.1 per cent from $11.15 billion in eight months last year.

Despite the imposition of additional U.S. import levies Aug. 15, Canadian exports to the U.S. for the month rose 26.6 per cent to $943.5 million from $745 million in August last year.

For the first eight months of 1971, exports to the U.S. were up 8.4 per cent to $7.87 billion from $7.26 billion in the same period of 1970.

The figures released by the federal statistics bureau today were preliminary totals for last month, based on incomplete returns. More details on export figures and totals of August imports will be released later.

Exports to the United Kingdom last month rose 17.5 per cent to $122.8 million from $104.5 million a year earlier. But cumulative exports to the U.K. for eight months this year were down 7.3 per cent to $925.1 million from $998.4 million in 1970.

Sales to Latin America totalled $60.1 million in August this year, up 43.4 per cent from $41.9 million in August, 1970. Cumulative sales were up 4.3 per cent to $370.3 million from $355.2 million.

B.C. Minister May Challenge Caouette Post

By ANDRE BELLEMARE

OTTAWA (CP) — The Social Credit leadership campaign, in a virtual rut, should take a new turn soon.

A group of leaders of the party's Quebec wing are preparing to introduce a candidate against the present leader, Real Caouette.

The new candidate will be Rene Matte, 36, (SC—Champlain) on whom rests the hope of rejuvenating the party and giving it a new impetus, say those who support his candidacy.

And strong rumor being repeated in Ottawa's Social Credit circles is that a British Columbia cabinet minister may resign from the province's Social Credit government to be nominated at the party's convention in Hull arena, Oct. 9-11.

While a challenge to Mr. Caouette's leadership is being organized in Ottawa, the party leader continues his visit to Vancouver.

If Mr. Matte became a definite candidate, another member of Parliament, Andre Fortin, 27, (SC—Lothiniere) could also enter the race.

During a telephone interview Tuesday, Mr. Fortin said that such a turn of events would be the motive for him to revise his position.

Mr. Fortin, house leader of the party, hesitated for a while before announcing two weeks ago he would not oppose Mr. Caouette.

RELUCTANT TO RUN

As in Mr. Fortin's case, Mr. Matte had indicated he had no ambitions to fight Mr. Caouette.

It appears that the strong participation of militants in the convention of the party's Quebec wing Sunday in Quebec City prompted various persons to run a first-class candidate against Mr. Caouette.

Some would like to offer delegates to the October convention a real leadership choice.

Many people feel, in fact, that the nomination of Dr. James McGillivray of the Toronto region, one of the party's vice-presidents and the only other candidate so far, would simply carry no weight against Mr. Caouette.

Mr. Matte said he had been sounded out, especially at the Quebec convention, on challenging Mr. Caouette for the leadership. Two senior party officials met with Mr. Matte Tuesday.

Mr. Matte's candidacy should be announced today, the last day to submit nomination papers.

Sturgeon Falls School Now Under Peaceful Siege

STURGEON FALLS, Ont. (CP) — The only high school in this bilingual town of 7,000 was under peaceful siege early today by about 150 Francophone students and adults.

They were unlikely to have a serious effect on today's classes. There was little protest when they obeyed police orders to confine their sit-in to the school cafeteria.

A meeting was scheduled in Toronto today with Robert Welch, Ontario education minister, in an attempt to iron out the dispute over the group's demand for separate French- and English-speaking secondary schools.

One skirmish was reported Tuesday night and several town police moved into the two-storey building. However, police reported later that it was a minor misunderstanding.

The group took over the school, under the watchful eye of town police, at the close of Tuesday's classes. Conditions were orderly at the building, which accommodates about 1,600 students, of whom about 1,200 are French-speaking.

MOST ARE BILINGUAL

Sturgeon Falls is approximately 87 per cent French-speaking, though most residents are bilingual. It has been the focal point of a battle over language rights for the last two years and has been hit by three previous school strikes.

The French-speaking students are angered by a Nipissing board of education decision to operate French- and Englishlanguage schools under one roof at the secondary school here.

They want the board to turn over the high school to the French-language students and use $2.2 million, now earmarked for expansion of the present facilities, to build a separate English-language high school.

In Tuesday's protest, Jean St. Louis, one of the leaders, said the group was prepared to stay in the school indefinitely. The Grade 13 student said arrangements might be made to bring in food and other necessities.

In sympathy with the protest here, North Bay's Ecole Secondaire Algonquin and Sudbury's Macdonald-Carter secondary held marches Tuesday as well.

Disaster Village Taken Apart

ST. JEAN VIANNEY, Que. (CP) — The remains of this once-thriving Saguenay Valley village are being pulled apart piece by piece.

Every day, some of the survivors of the May 4 landslide that killed 31 people and destroyed 41 homes return to see construction workers administer the final blow to the community.

The people come back to the municipal centre, stand at the top of the main street, and watch their houses being prepared for a 15-mile move to Arvida.

Heavy rainfall in the area during the last two weeks delayed start of the moving project, which is expected to be completed by the end of this year.

More than 40 homes in the town and the local church are to be moved by tractor trailer to their new sites.

READIED FOR MOVE

On two streets, where the houses were relatively undamaged by the earth slide, and where more than 1,000 people lived, modest bungalows have been grotesquely repositioned by a huge rectangular hoist so that they can be placed aboard transport trailers.

At the end of the streets is the massive crater, caused by the landslide.

Most of the mud and clay has dried up at the bottom of the hole and the homes that stood on the surface in the crater for several days after the slide have disappeared.

A car, the roof of a house and pieces of furniture are still scattered across the surface of the 60-foot deep pit.

The parish priest, Rev. Egide Boulianne, said: "In a few months, everything will be gone from here—even the church. There will be no more St. Jean Vianney."

SCHOOLS EMPTY

Three schools behind the church are empty. The schools are too large to be moved, and although geologists say they are on safe ground, it is unlikely they will be re-opened.

A temporary bridge has been built across the Riviere aux Vases where it flows into the Saguenay to allow police and construction workers to return to the village.

The old bridge was crushed by 15 million tons of clay when the earthslide washed down the valley.

The village's municipal centre will remain open until Nov. 1. Mayor Laureat Lavoie and the village council are still holding monthly meetings although the province assumed administration of the community Aug. 12.

On Nov. 1, the village council will dissolve itself and its debt of $273,000 will be absorbed by the province.

Publishers Buck Ban

OTTAWA (CP) — A seven-member delegation from the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association Tuesday night presented a brief to Health Minister John Munro which says a government bill to ban cigarette advertising and promotion should be replaced by federal control of "the content and form of cigarette advertising."

Earle Richards, vice-president and general manager of the Toronto Globe and Mail, and president of the CDNPA, said "we did feel encouragement" after a 90-minute meeting with Munro.

"I am very confident our brief will get consideration."

The association's brief asked the government to allow informative but not persuasive cigarette ads.

"We weren't arguing the health aspects," Richards told reporters later. "We were simply arguing that an alternative to an outright ban is to allow factual information in advertising."

Asked whether Munro appeared sympathetic to the proposals, Richards said "he understood our proposals."

Munro told the delegation the current legislative load would likely prevent passage of the legislation by Jan. 1 as scheduled.

The association's brief said that "the prohibition of the dissemination of factual information about any product is in our view, an unacceptable break with the freedom of the populace in a free society to be informed." Munro told reporters later that he will "certainly look" at the presentation "and I'll think about it." But he said he didn't think the government's legislation was an infringement on any fundamental right.

Guevara's Guerrilla Heirs Still Far From Victory

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — "Wherever death may surprise us, let it be welcome," urged Ernesto (Che) Guevara in a Cuba speech a few years before his own death in 1967 in Bolivia.

Death, he said, would be welcome "so long as our battle cry reaches some receptive ears and other hands reach out to pick up our weapons, and other men come forward to intone our funeral dirge with the staccato of machine-guns and new cries of battle and victory."

Others have come forward to take up the armed struggle in Latin America since Guevara and his little guerrilla band were wiped out by Bolivian army rangers trained by the United States.

But whether they operate in the countryside or the urban centres, the guerrillas of today are still far from victory.

Of the 20 Latin-American nations only three—Argentina, Guatemala and Uruguay—appear to have critical problems with guerrilla violence.

STANCE ANARCHIC

Each country affected by terrorist violence has its own movements and movements within movements. There is little evidence of co-operation across national boundaries. The bulk of the membership in the various organizations comes from university-age youths who believe in a vague Leninist-Marxist philosophy of Socialist governments run by the working class.

They cannot be arbitrarily labeled Communists. Many, moving beyond what they disparagingly call the bourgeois attitudes of the established Communist and socialist parties in Latin America, take up a stance that is almost anarchic and nihilist.

Only through armed struggle, they claim, can all power be won for the working class. They leave it unclear what kind of Socialist government would be formed when the old order toppled. But to question the goal is to be "counter-revolutionary."

The Latin-American guerrilla movement of the '70s had its genesis in the Cuban revolution of Fidel Castro.

Since that day in January, 1959, when Castro and his followers rode victoriously into Havana, after six years of guerrilla war against dictator Fulgencio Batista, others have tried to duplicate the feat.

BASIC FLAW

But a basic and major flaw seems to exist in their strategy: that the political conditions existing in Cuba were and still are different from those of other Latin-American countries.

In the 1960s Castro gave financial and material assistance to budding guerrilla movements all over the region, with tacit approval from the Soviet Union.

Cuba's role has been reduced sharply in recent years, although young leftists still receive guerrilla training there.

This is partly due to a shift by the Soviet Union, which subsidizes the lagging Cuban economy, toward peaceful diplomacy in Latin America.

Another factor in Cuba's declining influence among guerrilla movements was the failure of Che Guevara to establish a rural base in Bolivia.

FOCAL THEORY FAILED

Guevara espoused what has become to be known as the focal theory. Once a guerrilla movement began in the countryside, he claimed, a focal point would be established that grew and grew to become a popular guerrilla movement actively supported by the peasants.

His theory didn't work out.

In the diary he kept on his Bolivian experience, Guevara constantly despaired because of the lack of peasant support. A week before his capture he A week before his capture he wrote:

"The peasant mass aids us in nothing and is turning into informers."

Two factors in Latin America have begun to put the guerrilla movement on the defensive by undercutting its potential support.

Governments even of the military variety have begun to show signs of a social conscience. For example, Peru's military government boasts that its course "between democracy and communism" will mean a better deal for all Peruvians.

In Brazil, where a military government has been in power since 1964, President Garrastazu Medici acknowledges that prosperity hasn't trickled down to the lower classes, despite the country's spectacular economic growth, nine per cent a year.

His administration has sponsored a program to provide low-cost medical care to all Brazilians, and a profit-sharing plan which forces all businesses to set aside part of profits to be redistributed to employees.

Another factor has been a political innovation by the established left in Latin America: the use of democratic institutions to gain power peacefully.

Chile set the pace last fall when a left-wing coalition, a "popular-unity" group composed of Communists, Socialists, radicals and small splinter organizations, supported a Marxist for president.

Salvador Allende's victory was a setback for the guerrilla theory that only violence can bring needed changes.

Guerrillas Hanged

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Two guerrillas from the Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine were hanged at Amman central prison today, the government announced. The two, Mohammed Khalil Kaissi and Eissa Hilou, were found guilty by court martial of murdering a government employee. Twelve guerrillas have been executed in Jordan this year.

Hippies Barred

TUNIS (Reuter) — Thirty foreign hippies have been refused entry into Tunisia, the Tunisian news agency TAP reported Monday. Two weeks ago about 50 hippies were refused entry as part of a campaign in which some long-haired youths in Tunisia have been given compulsory haircuts by police.

Election Defeat Statistics Don't Worry Ontario's Davis

The last four provincial governments to call elections have been toppled and six of the eight provincial general elections since 1959 have seen changes of government.

The premier says he's not worrid about those statistics.

All nine provincial elections have been called in times of economic unrest and soaring unemployment.

Election calls meant disaster for three government leaders leading their parties to the polls for the first time, but three rookie pary chieftains led their forces to victory.

Another possible factor in elections that saw government changes was the lowering of the voting age in Nova Scotia in 1970 and this year in Alberta, where Peter Lougheed's Progressive Conservatives ended 36 yards of Social Credit rule last month.

A number of these same ingredients are simmering in the Ontario election pot.

Mr. Davis, 42, is seeking his first mandate as premier after taking over the reins of the Tory government from John Robarts last February.

It will also be the first election as leader for Stephen Lewis, 33, who took over from veteran Donald MacDonald as leader of the New Democratic Party almost a year ago.

The NDP has won the only byelection since the Tories boosted their string of general election victories to eight in 1967, taking 69 of 117 seats.

Standings in the legislature at dissolution were Progressive Conservatives 68, Liberals 27, NDP 21 and one independent.

Opposition Leader Robert Nixon will be leading his party into an election battle for the second time.

Also a factor in the Oct. 21 vote is the lowering of the voting age to 18 from 21, adding about 412,000 young people to the list of eligible voters.

Ed Schreyer started the string of election upsets June 25, 1969, when his New Democratic Party captured 28 seats in Manitoba to become the country's only NDP government at the time.

Since then, governments have changed hands in Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

When governments were returned—in British Columbia in 1969 and in Prince Edward Island in 1970—they came back with substantially-increased majorities.

Liberal Gerald Regan took the helm of the Nova Scotia government Oct. 13, 1970, after increasing his party's representation to 23 seats from six. He beat G. I. Smith who was in his first campaign as Conservative party leader after taking over from Robert Stanfield, now federal peader. The Tories had governed since 1956 in Nova Scotia.

When Richard Hatfield's Tories beat the Liberals under Louis Robichaud Oct. 26, 1970, they reversed the results of the 1967 election by taking 32 of 58 seats and ended 10 years of Liberal rule in New Brunswick.

Robert Bourassa and his Liberals swept to victory with 72 seats on April 29, 1970 in an election where Quebec independence was the major issue.

The Union Nationale government under Jean-Jacques Bertrand saw its strength reduced to 17 seats from 56.

Mr. Schreyer, like Mr. Bourassa, was a new opposition party leader when he captured Manitoba and ousted PC Premier Walter Weir, who had taken over from Duff Roblin and was facing his first election test.

SURPRISED SUPPORTERS

The NDP returned to power in Saskatchewan June 24 this year after an absence of seven years when Allan Blakeney led an upsurge that staggered even the most optimistic party supportrs by winning 45 of the 60 seats.

Liberal Ross Thatcher, who died one month after his defeat, saw Liberal strength reduced to 15 seats from 35.

In Alberta, Mr. Lougheed rode a "time-for-a-change" slogan into the driver's seat, pushing Social Credit into an opposition role in the legislature for the first time.

The PCs captured 48 seats compared to six in 1967 while Harry Strom's Socreds saw their strength dip to 26 from 55.

In Prince Edward Island, Liberal Alex Campbell captured 27 of the 32 seats May 11, 1970, for his second mandate after defeating the Conservatives by winning 17 seats in 1966.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett, now in his 20th year as government leader of B.C., increased Social Credit representation to 39 from 33 in the 55-seat legislature in August, 1969, while reducing NDP strength to 11 from 17 at dissolution.

Ottawa's Strait Study Set to Go

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has completed preliminary work in preparation for a major inventory study of the Strait of Georgia, reliable sources said Tuesday night.

The preparations are expected to lead to a joint study with the British Columbia government, as recommended to the federal government last Nov. 25 by the Science Council of Canada.

Since last spring federal officials have been assembling data on all the uses of the strait for recreation, fishing and forestry and on all the pollution sources affecting its waters.

Federal Environment Minister Jack Davis has designated the strait for Canada's first underwater park and last May cancelled all underwater oil and gas explorations permits.

He followed up the action with a letter to the major oil companies ruling out, in effect, any further exploration work in the strait.

The region is unique in Canada as the only coastal water with a "really major" population centre—Vancouver. The city, growing rapidly in limited space, puts especially great recreational pressures on the sheltered waters.

Here too are found rich natural resources, a traditional large fishery, major transportation routes for timber and the most important port on the Pacific's eastern edge.

Park Opens At Chilliwack

A salmon barbecue, fireworks display and a concert by the Canadian forces' Naden band will follow opening ceremonies of a new provincial park Friday at Chilliwack.

To be named Sapper Park, the park's road and bridges have been built by British and Canadian military engineers.

The British contingent will present a plaque at 1:30 p.m. and Col. R. M. Black, former commander of CFB, Chilliwack, will then open the 1½-mile road from Depot Creek into the park area at the south end of Chilliwack Lake.

Maj.-Gen. G. F. Caldwell will officially open a bridge over Dolly Varden Creek, built by his men since they arrived in July. It will be named Victoria Bridge.

Lt.-Gov. J. R. Nicholson will officially open the park and inspect the Canadian and British servicemen.

Ethnic Issues Juggled By Malaysia

By MORT ROSENBLUM

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — Malaysia is like a juggler, whose nose begins to twitch. Maybe he can control the sneeze. Maybe it will mess up his act.

The leaders of this country have the job of providing a balance between the two major segments of population —the 45 per cent of indigenus Malays and the 40 per cent of Chinese descent, a people who came to work here and gradually took economic control.

The government is pushing the status of Malays. At the same time Communist guerrillas, oriented toward the Chinese, are gaining strength.

The Malay-weighted cabinet has a $4.7 billion five-year development plan aimed primarily at improving the lot of Malays, largely farmers, fishermen and unskilled workers.

New measures advance the Malay language and culture. The Johore state education department says it will return unread any letters not written in Malay—the national language.

CAUSES CONCERN

Until lately English was still dominant in this former British colony. Chinese and Indian families often chose English —if not Chinese or Tamil—for their children's schooling. And although it is against the law to criticize the tide, non-Malays are plainly concerned with its speed and thrust.

"Yes, there is support for the guerrillas around here," said a well-educated Chinese woman in Ipoh, a key tin-mining centre 140 miles north of this capital. "Many Chinese look at what the government is doing and figure it's the choice between the devil and the deep blue sea."

The Communists, remnants of guerrillas who fought security forces in 1948-60, have apparently gained strength and are ambushing soldiers in new areas. They may number 2,000 or more on the Malayan Peninsula.

Non-Malay discontent is generally less extreme, mainly passive. Applications for immigrant visas are up at the Australian legation. Many job-seekers go to Singapore.

Bitter racial clashes in Kuala Lumpur left hundreds dead in May, 1969, and affected the government like a splash of ice water. Emergency rule was imposed, and riot troops were trained.

SPEECH LIMITED

Democracy has returned. Parliament got back into business last February. But the law forbids parliamentarians or anyone else to discuss the Malay language's position, the status of Malay rulers and Malay special rights.

These measures had support from many non-Malays who felt that a limited democracy was better than the threatened alternatives.

Now the government, protected partly by its powers of control, must seek better balance. They must convince disadvantaged Malays that help is on the way while assuring non-Malays that they won't lose out.

"The government knows it can't create economic equality overnight" said a Western diplomat. "But how can a prime minister here tell the Malay he must wait 20 years?"

It's just as hard to convince non-Malays they are not being held back when employment quotas are set and government machinery sometimes favors the Malay.

LABOR IMPORTED

The problem dates to the last century. Chinese and Indians were brought to do the manual labor of developing the peninsula's tin mines, rubber estates and physical infra-structure.

Their branching into business disrupted the historic Malay marketing system. Their working hours exceeded prior levels and they promoted from within their own ranks.

By independence in 1957 the Chinese and Indians held a disproportionate percentage of the country's wealth and jobs.

Malays, with political control, resented the takeover by people they still considered aliens.

In the last few years, government-backed bodies have made loans to Malays, cleared land to give them farms, subsidized commercial ventures and trained artisans and technicians. New measures in the development plan work along those lines, with some added advantages.

Boy Trampled

COCHRANE, Alta. (CP) — A 10-year-old boy was trampled to death by horses on his parent's farm 19 miles northeast of here.

The boy, whose name was not released, was trying to herd the animals through a gate. He was being assisted by a brother and sister, who escaped injury.

Cochrane is 15 miles northwest of Calgary.

Lortie Trial Statement Used

MONTREAL (CP) — A statement made by Bernard Lortie at a coroner's inquest last November was introduced as evidence at his kidnapping trial today.

Lortie, a 19-year-old student from Gaspe, is one of four men charged with kidnapping and strangling Pierre Laporte, then Quebec labor minister, last October. He is to stand trial later on the murder charge.

At his kidnapping trial today, Judge Jacques Trahan testified that he presided as coroner over an inquest on Mr. Laporte's death.

He said Lortie made a statement Nov. 7 without asking for the protection of court so that the statement could not be used against him.

Richard Russel, 22, level stenographer at the inquest, also identified a copy of the statement as the one made by Lortie. The statement was not read in court.

ALSO ARE CHARGED

The other three charged with the kidnap-slaying are Paul Rose, 27, his brother Jacques, 23, and Francis Simard 23.

Paul Rose and Simard were convicted earlier on the murder charge and were sentenced to life imprisonment.

Claude Laporte testified that Lortie was sitting in the right front seat of the car and "looked at me when the car went by."

The labor minister had been playing football in the street with his nephew last Oct. 10 when a car pulled up and the kidnap victim was forced into the back seat at gunpoint.

Industry Fears Controls

VANCOUVER (CP) — The forest industry says the British Columbia economy would be seriously impaired by implementation of the provincial government's proposed pollution control objectives.

President Gordon Draeseke of the council of the Forest Industries of B.C. said in a written statement Tuesday that recently announced government objectives for the industry would require capital expenditure of nearly a third of a billion dollars and even then might not be technologically feasible.

He said many of the government's ultimate objectives are "still theoretical."

"The industry has committed itself to spend $85 million in the first five years of the 1970s — in itself a serious drain on available capital," Draeseke said.

"Needless to say, the mills are doing their utmost to minimize pollution but very often performance is not consistent with claims made for it. Older mills are in a very difficult position and probably never can be revised to reach level A."

SEAWAY PLANS TOLL CHALLENGE

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The Seaway Port Authority of Duluth, Minn., plans a court challenge to stop the United States government from collecting tolls on ships travelling the St. Lawrence Seaway, says Duluth port director C. Thomas Burke.

The suit will be filed soon in federal court against the U.S. government, the secretary of transportation and the St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corp., the U.S. agency that collects Great Lakes-Seaway system tolls, Burke said.

Burke's statements were prepared for delivery today to the National Waterways Conference, Inc., in St. Paul.

"Were it not for the seaway tolls, he said, "the economic expansion in our area would be without comparison in the annals of our history."

Burke described the tolls as the political price paid to Atlantic and Gulf Coast interests" for construction of the seaway.

Burke said he had discussed the legal challenge with Attorney-General Warren Spannaus and felt there was a chance the state of Minnesota might join the Seaway Port Authority in the suit.

Lions Receive Thanks

Eight local Lions Clubs have received 25th anniversary certificates and letters from the international relief and development agency CARE in appreciation of help given victims of the tidal wave in East Pakistan and those who lost their homes in the Peruvian earthquake.

Local clubs donated more than $1,000 out of $21,910.89 contributed by clubs in British Columbia, Washington and part of Idaho, forming the multiple district.

With the help of the Lions' donations, work has begun in East Pakistan and Peru on the building of homes and schools by villagers working under trained supervisors provided by host governments.

Materials and tools have been provided by the Lions and transported by the host governments.

To be made of pressed blocks, home units are being prepared on Bhola Island, hardest hit by the East Pakistan storms. They will be patterned after the CARE housing units built in Chittagong which successfully withstood the tidal wave, assuring villagers of increased security from the severe storms that frequent the area.

Monsoon rains temporarily delayed housing construction in Peru but supplies provided by the Lions were used to repair and reinforce dams that were weakened by the earthquake.

Reconstruction work has now begun in the villages of Olleros and Hauripampa.

The Council of Governors has selected Colombia for the Lions' 1971-1972 project.

Nutrition centes, where school children will be fed nourishing meals each day, will be built in the Latin American country.

Bennett Boys Cancel Suit

KELOWNA (CP) — An application by the sons of Premier Bennett to dismiss a libel action brought by them against the Vancouver Sun, was granted in chambers here Tuesday by Provincial Court Judge A. D. C. Washington.

R. J. Bennett and W. R. Bennett requested the dismissal because the libel act specifies one clear day must be given between the publication of an alleged libel and the issuance of a writ. The Bennett brothers writ had been filed a day after publication of an alleged libelous story in the Sun Feb. 17.

U.S. VEHICLES BOMBED BY SOUTH VIETNAMESE

SAIGON (AP) — Angered by the killing of a Vietnamese youth by a United States soldier, Vietnamese on motorbikes threw firebombs at U.S. vehicles in Hue in a new wave of anti-American demonstrations, U.S. officers reported Tuesday.

In Saigon, a U.S. Navy petty officer was severely burned after two youths on a motorbike hurled a homemade bomb into his pick-up truck outside navy headquarters. It was the third firebombing of U.S. vehicles there in five days.

Also in Saigon, a group of disabled South Vietnamese veterans demonstrated in front of the U.S. embassy for improved benefits, and a group called Catholics for Peace urged the removal of U.S. "occupation troops" from Vietnam. No incidents were reported.

Field reports said five firebombs were hurled at U.S. military police vehicles and trucks and cars belonging to the U.S. civilian contractors during a four-hour demonstration Monday night in Hue.

About 90 Hue university students held another demonstration today. U.S. officials said it was peaceful.

No American injuries were reported in the Hue demonstrations. The city was placed off limits to U.S. soldiers.

Pakistani Quits Post

LONDON (Reuter) — A high-ranking diplomat with the Pakistani mission in Nigeria said here Monday he has left his post and switched his allegiance to the East Pakistan separatist movement. Mohiuddin Ahmed Jaigirdar, head of chancery at the Pakistani mission in Lagos since 1970, said he left Nigeria and flew to London Saturday. He will seek political asylum in Britain.

Introducing the best clothing values since our suits

Tip Top is famous for value.

For years we've been offering suits that are priced from $10.00 to $25.00 less than comparable suits found in other stores.

Now, we're introducing a new extra-value in sport jackets and slacks. At $59.88 these jackets are $10.00 to $20.00 less than you'd pay for the same fine quality, the same up-to-the-minute styling in any other store.

The cloth is a classic, all-wool tweed. It comes in warm greens, browns, greys and blues.

Note: at this same price, we have beautiful navy blue blazers.

Our slacks at $19.99. You'd pay up to $30.00 in some other stores.

We've gorgeous flannels, hopsacks and wrinkle-free knits. In every colour to wear with our jackets. And you can choose flared or executive-cut bottoms.

In short, when you buy a $59.88 sport jacket and a pair of $19.99 slacks from Tip Top, you're paying up to $30.00 less than you'd pay elsewhere.

Will our sport jacket and slack value become more famous than our suits?

TIP TOP

Of course you can charge it.

Tip Top. The men's wear store designed to change your mind about men's wear stores.

Last Rail Link Connects Iran With Europe

TEHRAN (CP) — The long-awaited rail link between Iran and Turkey is scheduled to be inaugurated finally Sept. 24. The last stretch from the Qotor bridge to the Turkish border was ready a few months ago, but the inauguration had to wait for the completion of the ferry across Lake Van on the Turkish side.

The railway connects Iran to Europe via the famous Istanbul Train, passing through Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Austria and on to Western Europe. It closes one of four gaps that have prevented passengers going by train all the way from Paris to Singapore. The remaining gaps are those between Kerman and Zahedan inside Iran, the one across the Pakistan-Burma border and that across the Burma-Thailand border.

Already plans to close the Kerman-Zahedan gap are being discussed in Tehran and the project is likely to be taken up during Iran's fifth five-year plan. The fourth plan (March 1968 to March 1973), currently being implemented, provides for only a survey of the area in south-eastern Iran.

The Iran-Turkey line goes almost due west from Tabriz on the Iranian side, skirting the northern tip of the beautiful but almost forgotten Lake Rezaiyeh after passing Sharafkhaneh, and then across the Qotor valley, which made for one of the most difficult construction stretches. This had to be crossed by a 390-foot-high bridge, made in the United States and imported to Iran in parts.

FERRY CROSSING

On the Turkish side the line again goes through difficult mountain territory to Van, one of the towns Turkey has been trying to develop as a tourist resort. The railway should do the trick, as it crosses Lake Van by a 50-mile ferry ride.

Officials in Tehran believe the train should be popular enough to enable five or six runs a week. In fact, countries like Iran do not face the same problem of lack of train passengers as in the more developed countries of the West, and the official forecast may not be entirely off the mark. For one thing the train should provide an interesting alternative to tourists who now must use buses and cars to travel east.

However, being an express, the train will not have many stops along the way. Tickets being sold in Tehran early this month will be available for Zakeria Razi on the Iran-Turkish border, Van, Heydar Pasha port and Istanbul in Turkey, and then for Belgrade, Vienna, Munich, Paris, The Hague, Brussels, London and Paris.

From Turkey it will be possible to get connections to Syria, Lebanon, Jordan and Iraq through older international lines already linking these Middle Eastern countries.

FARES LOW

From Tehran the farthest point east to which one can get a connection as of now is Mashad, near the Afghan border. The rest still is in the planning stage. There are plans to take the line from Mashad to Taiyabad, on the Afghan border; plans to take the southern line from Zarand, where it now stops, on to Kerman and Zahedan, from where it will link up with the Pakistan line; plans to take yet another line from Mashad to Kerman and then south to Bandar Abbas on the Persian Gulf, opening a trade transit route for the Afghans, and a whole lot of lesser plans, all currently being discussed with varying degrees of enthusiasm.

For those who do not mind the discomfort of train travel in exchange for being able to see something along the way, the first-class fare from Tehran to Paris will be $80, a lot less than the air fare.

VEGETARIAN CUTS MEAT

ABBOTTS LANGLEY, England (CP) — Paul Kingston, who took over his father's butchering business in Hertfordshire, is a meat carver with a difference — he is a vegetarian. "I saw a religious vision in which I was told to make a sacrifice," he recalled. Before the change Kingston, 35, ate more than three pounds of steak a week.

Thant Won't Predict Seating of Peking

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The United States' effort to retain a seat for Nationalist China in the UN apparently has been effective enough to make the question of seating of the People's Republic this year too close to call.

Secretary-General U Thant said at a news conference Tuesday that it is not possible at this stage to predict the outcome of the annual China debate in the General Assembly in mid-October.

Thant said that China "could" become a member this year, but qualified his remarks, saying that some countries have told him that they will not make up their mind before the eve of the assembly debate.

The assembly this year will have at least two resolutions before it, including the usual Albanian one calling for the expulsion of the Nationalist Chinese and the seating of Peking.

The Americans are attempting through legal manouvering to allow two Chinas to be seated, although Peking has made it clear it would not sit with the Nationalists. Thant reconfirmed that Monday, saying statements to that effect by Peking are a "firm statement of policy."

The Americans are expected to submit another resolution later this week.

Its contents have not been divulged but it is expected to be a moderation of past American resolutions saying that a two-thirds majority is required for the passage of the Albanian move.

Instead of that the Americans are expected to say that the section of the Albanian resolution calling for the expulsion of the Nationalists requires the two-thirds majority.

Meanwhile, Thant told his press conference that he definitely will step down as secretary-general at the end of the year.

The General Assembly now is faced with the difficulty of finding a successor acceptable to all. None of the potential candidates so far mentioned is acceptable to all blocs.

FIRE CHIEF'S $15 BID RINGS BELL

WARWICK, N.Y. (UPI) — Volunteer fire department Chief Duane Joslyn had no idea what was in the package he was bidding on at a fund-raising event for the department but the package looked big enough to be worth his $15 bid.

When Joslyn opened the package, he discovered it contained the bell from one of this Orange County community's fire trucks.

Members from another volunteer department allegedly "borrowed" the bell earlier in the day, wrapped it up and offered it as a sale item.

INDIAN RESERVE DISPUTE

Eviction Order Stayed

BRANTFORD Ont. (CP) — A Toronto lawyer said today an interim injunction has been obtained from the Supreme Court of Ontario to save Yvonne Bedard and her children from immediate eviction from the Six Nations Indian reserve.

Malcolm Montgomery said the injunction obtained Tuesday restrains the reserve's elected council from evicting Mrs. Bedard and her two young children at least until Sept. 22 "or until the final disposition of the case."

Mrs. Bedard, born and raised on the reserve, lost her legal Indian status when she married a non-Indian man.

After she and her husband separated in 1970, she returned with her children to live in a house on the reserve willed to her by her late mother.

The band council granted her permission to reside on the reserve for a year. But this July, the council gave her until the end of August to leave.

Mrs. Bedard decided to stay and fight the eviction.

Mr. Montgomery said the sections of the Indian Act which deprived Mrs. Bedard of her legal status as an Indian are contrary to the Canadian Bill of Rights.

Island Growers Support Idea Of Farm 'Union'

Vancouver Island fruit growers will support "any move that will give the farmers a better deal," a spokesman said today.

Dixon Holloway, president of the Saanich Fruit Growers Association, welcomed the announcement that B.C.'s 3,200 Interior fruit growers have voted to study formation of a union as a way to gain legal power to tie up or halt imports of foreign fruit.

He said while the provincial association is concerned with tree fruit, the Saanich growers of mainly berry crops face the same problems of competition from imported fruit selling at "bargain basement prices."

Holloway added: "It certainly depresses prices down to a point where there are no new farmers coming because of the lack of incentives. They can earn four to five times as much in industry, and as the present farmers get too old to continue fruit farming will die off."

LOGANBERRIES

The association, representing some 50 growers on the Saanich peninsula, produces mainly strawberries and loganberries. Over the years it has complained that importation of soft fruits into Canada from the U.S. seriously affects the sale of home-grown products.

Delegates to the B.C. Fruit Growers Association meeting Monday in Penticton advised the executive to undertake a study of the union proposal and report to the annual meeting in January.

Growers said a union would have enabled them to completely stop Australian fruit from entering Canada last spring. As it was, growers' picket lines were purely informational.

The $30 million a year industry has gone through two years of poor prices to farmers, with prospects for this year almost as bad.

Avery King of Penticton told the meeting: "If you think our problems are serious now, wait a few years when China wants a place in our market. China produces millions of boxes of apples a year."

BREAK MONOPOLY

Meanwhile, opposition leader Dave Barrett today called on the provincial government to create farmers' markets throughout the province to "break the monopoly" of chain store food distribution.

Barrett also said the government should bring in legislation requiring all government agencies which serve food to buy B.C. products first.

He said the situation in the Okanagan requires low-interest loans for fruit growers to save them from being unable to meet capital payments.

Barrett said the province should pressure Ottawa to stop the dumping of U.S. agricultural products in Canada.

FLOODED MARKETS

He said apple growers in the Okanagan are being told they will be paid only 0.4 cents per pound for apples because of flooded markets.

He accused Socred MLA's of ignoring the fruit growers.

"Twenty years ago Social Credit would have been there (at the Penticton meeting Monday). "Where were they?" Barrett said.

Barrett said Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford should "lead a crash program to put B.C. agricultural products back on the map."

Inflation Feared a Drag on Savings

BARRETT
. . . new laws

Continued inflation in Canada may conflict with the government's desire to stimulate greater savings for investment purposes, a leading trust executive said Tuesday.

J. Allyn Taylor, president of Canada Trust-Huron and Erie, said in an interview following the company's centennial executive board meeting, the risk of higher interest rates and inflation remain despite urgings of restraint and government controls.

"People are not going to risk savings in long-term investments if they are afraid their dollars of today are going to be traded for cheap dollars down the line," Taylor said.

He saw no significant change in long-term interest rates by spring of 1972, but qualified that by saying the effect of President Nixon's wage-price freeze, import surcharge and other economic controls in the next 2½ months can't help but affect the situation in Canada.

A pent-up demand for capital in Canada would be enough by itself to give basis to a rise in interest rates, Taylor said.

ATTRACT SAVINGS

As for the mortgage industry, the future depends on the ability of lenders to attract deposits, or savings by Canadians, he said.

He said the people of B.C. appear to realize clearly the need for development capital and that the 22 million population of Canada can not possibly produce enough to satisfy demand. Nor can they consume all the goods they produce and therefore depend heavily on world markets, Taylor said.

Canada Trust recognizes the role it can play in development of B.C., he pointed out, and in fact this province rates second to Ontario for funds committed by the company to new projects.

Taylor said of $600 million invested in all forms in B.C. by Canada Trust, $135 million is in mortgages and 85 per cent of that is in housing. The rest of the investment is in trust and agency business.

$40 MILLION

Twenty years ago Canada Trust had only $40 million invested in this province, the president said.

The executive board meeting at the Empress Hotel was attended by members of Victoria and Vancouver advisory boards to Canada Trust.

Previously, to mark the 100th anniversary of B.C. joining Confederation, Taylor and directors were host to Premier Bennett at luncheon.

Iran Visit

KARACHI (AP) — President Agha Mohammed Yayha Khan of Pakistan has left for a two-day visit to Iran. No reason for his trip was given but diplomats said Tuesday his discussions with the Shah of Iran probably would touch on relations between India and Pakistan.

Talks to Continue

BONN (AP) — Talks between West Germany and Czechoslovakia on a possible non-aggression treaty will resume in Prague Sept. 27 after a break of nearly four months, the foreign ministry announced Tuesday. The main stumbling block in the discussions so far has been Czechoslovakia's insistence that Bonn declare Hitler's 1938 Munich pact as invalid from the start.

Indian Lawyer Named B.C. Provincial Judge

Alfred J. Scow, British Columbia's first native Indian lawyer, has been appointed a provincial court judge, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson announced Tuesday.

SCOW
. . . New Judge

Scow, 44, will be provincial court judge in the Prince Rupert area. He was born in Alert Bay and attended the University of British Columbia.

He is a member of the Kwicksutaneuk band. Scow was called to the bar in 1962. He has worked as city prosecutor for New Westminster and before law school, had been business agent for the Native Brotherhood of B.C.

Until recently, Scow has been chairman of a board of review for the Workmen's Compensation Board. He is the second native Indian to become a provincial court judge.

His father, William Scow, was appointed to provincial court in Alert Bay in 1967.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

YOUR HEALTH Dr. Walter Alvarez

One of the common annoyances of mankind is a stiff and painful shoulder. This type of trouble often appears in persons who are subject to fibrositis, a minor form of arthritis which tends to come and go at intervals all through a person's life but does not cause deformity of the joints. Even after 50 years of repeated attacks of aching and soreness of the person's hands and feet, or his shoulder or knee, or his back of neck — especially in the morning when he first gets up — he will not be crippled. The trouble tends to produce stiffness and soreness mainly in the muscles and tissues around the joints.

Most patients with fibrositis get by without any treatment. When having a bad spell, they can get help from heat, massage, standing under a hot shower or taking a hot bath, and exercises. Often the morning stiffness goes away after the person has been up and around for a while. Aspirin or some other pain-killer can help, if the pain should become distressing.

One of the painful conditions that can come to a person with a tendency to arthritis or fibrositis is bursitis, a condition which may last a few weeks and may cause much discomfort. A bursa is a little sac which lies near a joint and works with the tendon, the fibrous cord that usually runs from a muscle to a bone in an arm or leg. The bursa that probably gives the most trouble is the one that lies under the muscle which forms the cap of the shoulder.

If the person does not soon get relief from the pain, and if he constantly humors the arm and does not keep moving it, he may get a stiff shoulder with a wasting of the muscles around it. At the beginning, the distress can be helped by massage, heat application, and movement of the arm. If this does not help, X-ray treatment can be tried. Rarely does the bursa have to be operated on.

I remember when one of my relatives suffered from a bursitis and six weeks of expert physiotherapy did not work a cure. My friend, the X-ray man, took over; he gave two X-ray treatments, and that was the end of the trouble.

If I had any lasting pain in or around a shoulder, I would like to see an expert in diseases of muscles and joints; he would probably get X-ray films to see if the bone ends in the shoulder joint were roughened, or if the joint between the collar bone and the forward projection of the shoulder blade was loosened up. In some cases, an orthopedist might be consulted.

All of this illustrates the fact that clinic practice is often good, if only because in a clinic it is so easy to call together several specialists. This is especially important in the case of a patient who has a severe low backache. In that case I like to have a good history taken first, then a complete physical examination and the necessary laboratory work done. After that an expert X-ray man will make a study of the spine, and a neurologist may study the patient to see if any nerve coming out of the spinal column has been damaged; then an examination may be done by an orthopedist who may notice that one of the man's legs is shorter than the other, or his spinal curve is abnormal.

I may want to discuss the patient's problem with a surgeon who has spent much of his life operating on "slipped discs," and who can tell me whether he thinks surgery will help in this case. Finally, in a rare case, say in an aging man, I will have the kidneys, bladder and prostrate gland examined. Obviously, such a complete search would be extremely difficult and expensive unless all these specialists were practicing together in a large clinic and were easily available to one another.

WE GOOFED!

Just the other day we ran a photo and of a large, "close-in", two-bedroom home. Frankly, we goofed! The photo didn't say anything, it didn't show the bright roomy kitchen with almost 13 feet of molded counter space, the cosy carpeted living room, or the 3-pc. 4x12 bathroom. You couldn't see all the fun space, in the 30 foot square basement or the double garage-workshop out back. But come to think of it, a ½ dozen photos wouldn't have done justice. See for yourself how comfortable you can be for $23,500. Call Pat Forbes, she'll be happy to show you. 477-1841. Open house Wed., Thurs., Fri., 6 to 9 p.m. Donuts and coffee served. 726 Powderly St.

FAIRY TALE

Paradise was lost. Nobody could find it. Then Pat Forbes went strolling through the land of listings. She chanced upon an emerald point on a beautiful body of water. Some happy people told her that this was just "paradise" they showed her their two bedroom castle. Lovely solid elfin handiwork. Soft carpet underfoot. Blazing logs on the living room hearth. Nifty cabinet kitchen. Candle lit dining-room, full length windows overlooking "paradise." More nice rooms in the ground level basement. Delightfull When Pat told the folks how many people were looking for "paradise" they agreed to let another family take their place. So if you'd like to live happily ever after call Pat Forbes at 477-1841 to view.

Eagles Threatened By Insecticides

Biologists today expressed fears that insecticides may be the cause of the extremely low reproductive rate of bald eagles on the San Juan Islands.

At the same time they expressed deep concern at the heavy mercury and DDT residues found in birds this summer in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Charles Nash, an expert on predatory birds at Friday Harbor, said there were only two confirmed hatchings of chicks from 23 bald eagle nests surveyed this spring.

This would indicate a low reproductive rate throughout the Gulf Islands and South Vancouver Island, he said.

He didn't know the cause for the poor hatchings.

"No study was conducted," he said. "It might have been due to our harsh late spring or soft eggshells."

(DDT in species of predatory birds interferes with their calcium metabolism in such a way that the eggshell becomes too thin to perform its function.)

David Stirling, a Victoria bird expert, said the low reproductive rate may signal the start of the decline of the predatory bird population in this area.

"DDT residue have been found in birds in this area," he said. "It evidently comes from the Fraser Valley."

Meanwhile, Rory Finnegan, B.C. Fish and Wildlife biologist, says he is deeply concerned with mercury and DDT contamination in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Mercury residues three parts per millions were found in pigeons, guillemots and auklets — two sea birds, he said.

"Pigs have died from that amount of residue in their livers," he said.

While there is no evidence yet of the fish-eating birds dying from mercury poisoning, he sadi, it would no doubt have its effect in time.

"Some birds are also carrying a heavy burden of DDT — up to 80 and 90 parts per millions," he added.

Finnegan belives the mercury and DDT are swept into Queen Charlotte waters by oceanic currents.

"The chemical and insecticide originate from outside British Columbia," he stated.

He was critical of the World Health Organization for not banning DDT and still supporting its use for the control of malaria.

"They could control mosquitoes by another means," he said. "In five years WHO will have to change its tune."

Kirkby Back In Hot Water

Uvic philosophy professor Ronald Kirkby has clashed with the university administration over how he want to teach some courses and there are indications it may cost him his job.

Kirkby, 33, who caused a stir on campus last October by speaking in support of the FLQ during the crisis in Quebec, apparently wants to blend three philosophy courses into a "learning experience" and to include workshops in the Gestalt process.

His plan has been rejected and he has been advisd that if he does not follow his department's decisions, steps will be initiated to remove him from the faculty.

Kirkby was in Vancouver today and could not be reached for comment. But he indicated Tuesday he intends going ahead with his proposal.

He said he expects there will be a public meeting Monday when the philosophy department will present its views on the subject.

Faulkner Orders 219 Interned

BELFAST (CP) — Prime Minister Brian Faulkner of Northern Ireland signed internment orders today for 219 suspected terrorists.

The orders covered most of the suspects rounded up by the British Army in a search-an-seize attack against the outlawed Irish Republican Army Aug. 9 and held since in the prison ship Maidstone and in Crumlin Road jail.

Of the 300 arrested in August, 60 were released almost immediately. Another 12 men were released Tuesday night. But special branch detectives arrested 40 others within the last week.

Bernadette Devlin, a member of the British Parliament and a leading civil rights leader, said the orders will intensify the campaign for equal rights for Roman Catholics and "speed Faulkner's downfall."

Meanwhile, a sudden wave of bullet and bomb attacks on British troops raised fears that the IRA's promised offensive may be under way in embattled Ulster.

Two soldiers were killed and five others gravely wounded by snipers and gunmen lying in ambush Tuesday night and early today.

A 40-year-old sniper shot by British troops at an army post in Londonderry after midnight died today in hospital. After he was shot, the man was dragged away by sympathizers from the Roman Catholic district of Creggan and Bogside. The army later announced his death in the hospital.

The latest British army casualty came when gunmen ambushed an army patrol at midnight 40 miles west of Belfast. They killed an army sergeant and seriously wounded another soldier by shooting him in the back with a burst of automatic fire.

This attack near Dungannon brought the death toll of British soldiers to 22 since sectarian violence erupted in Northern Ireland two years ago.

Tuesday afternoon, snipers shot a soldier on guard duty in Londonderry's Catholic Creggan housing project.

An armored car taking him to hospital was also sprayed with bullets. He died soon afterwards.

Only a few hours before the soldier was killed by a sniper bullet, another trooper was shot in the neck outside the same post and was reported in serious condition.

Another soldier was gunned down later as he stood guard outside Belfast's Royal Victoria Hospital.

Gerry Fitt, ailing leader of Ulster's opposition Social and Democratic Labor party, meanwhile assailed the IRA's militant "Provisional" wing as "madmen living in a world of hate and inhumanity."

Fitt, in a statement issued from the Dublin hospital where he is being treated for a slipped disc, condemned what he called the "brutal rejection" by the Provisionals of a peace appeal by Roman Catholic church leaders in the North.

"If I am to be true to my political principles then when I condemn the use of British bayonets in Northern Ireland I must also condemn the political use of an IRA bomb."

Films Depict Development Of Air Lines

Two films, showing the development of two air lines, will be shown Saturday when the Victoria Flight of the Canadian Owners and Pilots Association meets at the Colonial Inn at 7 p.m.

President Norm Gold will present a film and commentary on Air West and sales manager Jim Mutch will show films he took 20 years ago of CP Air activities.

Both films contain local scenes and personalities.

Pilots attending the meeting will be asked to record opinions of the latest arrangements for lower mainland air traffic control.

COPA's official view of modified dimensions announced in April is that approach and departure corridors for large passenger aircraft is the best solution to the problem.

The changes made in April resulted from small plane pilot and owner groups protesting that restrictions were unsafe and too severe.

The ministry of transport has asked for comments on the modifications before making them permanent and mandatory.

Home Pushes Big 4 Role in Mideast

CAIRO (Reuter) — Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas Home of Britain called today for urgent reactivation of the mission of United Nations Middle East envoy Gunnar V. Jarring and said the Big Four powers have a collective role to play in the crisis.

Answering questions at a news conference at the end of his three-day visit to Cairo, he said Britain is not trying to take over United States efforts to reconcile the Arabs and Israelis.

"This is a problem which has to be solved by joint efforts," he said.

Sir Alec said the four powers — the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France — might be able to make some constructive suggestions on the Middle East at the UN General Assembly. He said he felt that the Big Four should try to resume the Jarring mission and try to get Israeli co-operation.

Sir Alec flies to Morocco for the second stage of his tour.

During his visit to Cairo, the first official visit by a British foreign secretary since before the 1956 Suez crisis, he had detailed discussions with President Anwar Sadat, Premier Mahmoud Fawzi and Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad.

British officials described the talks as friendly.

Trustee Quits

Saanich school board has received the resignation of Trustee Zachary Hamilton, who represents Central Saanich on the board. In his letter to the board Hamilton gave no reason for his action, but he later said in an interview he was resigning because "I cannot give to school district business the time and attention the taxpayer deserves."

U.S. Solid Favorite To Take Ryder Cup

ST. LOUIS (AP) — America's tour-toughened veterans — even with Lee Trevino asd Billy Casper scheduled only for part-time performances — ranked as solid favorites to best Britain's best in the biennial Ryder Cup matches that begin a three-day run Thursday.

Britain, spearheaded by Tony Jacklin and Peter Butler, scored a major upset in 1969 when it tied the United States 16-16 in Southport, England.

That was the first time the U.S. had failed to win since 1957. The dozen pros who make up the American team are determined it won't happen again.

The American squad is headed by Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Trevino. Trevino, still weak from a recent appendectomy, and Casper, who has an injured foot, will play only once a day.

WILL LIMIT THEM

"I won't play either one of them more than 18 holes a day," Jay Hebert, the non-playing captain of the U.S. team, said today. "Trevino just isn't ready to play more than that and Casper can't go more on that foot."

In addition to Palmer, Nicklaus, Trevino and Casper, Hebert can select from a group made up of Masters champion and recent World Series of Golf winner Charles Coody, Miller Barber, Frank Beard, 44-year-old Gardner Dickinson, Gene Littler, Mason Rudolph, J.C. Snead and Dave Stockton.

Barrett Sees Socred Plot For Election

The provincial government will "subtly foster" a major labor-management confrontation next year and then use it to call an election, Oppposition leader Dave Barrett predicted here Tuesday.

Speaking to the Kiwanis Club of Victoria, Barrett said the Bennett government, which thrives on labor unrest, would try to take advantage of a confrontation between the forest industry and the International Woodworkers of America.

He said the two are scheduled to begin a new round of negotiations next year.

Amchitka II To Present Skits, Films

A series of speeches, skits films, music and songs will be featured in the mass rally, arranged to mark City of Victoria Amchitka Day, to be held in Centennial Square from noon to 6 p.m. Friday.

Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, chancellor of Notre Dame University in Nelson, will be one of those speaking in a program lasting from noon to 1:30 p.m. which will be chaired by Amchitka II president Rhoda Kaellis.

Also speaking Friday will be Chief Philip Paul of the Tsartlip Indian band, Dr. Harvey Richardson, Dr. Marion Sherman, Blayney Scott, Dr. Robert Morris of First United Church, John White, Cool-Aid worker Kathy Sharkey, Homer Stevens of Vancouver, Larry Ryan, Mrs. Daphne Temple, A. G. Coning, Msgr. Michael O'Connell and Acting Mayor, Ald. Percy Frampton.

Amchitka II member James Gorst will be in charge of the evening program of speeches, scheduled for 5 to 6 p.m.

Skits, films, music and songs will be presented from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

A telegram will be read from Prime Minister Trudeau, extending his best wishes for the rally.

Building Priorities For Talks

Following decreased enrolment in the school district this year the Greater Victoria school board will hold a special meeting Sept. 30 to reconsider its building priorities for 1972.

This meeting will precede a meeting between the board and the provincial government to discuss re-allocation of building funds for next year, the board's construction and maintenance committee decided Tuesday night.

As most of the decreases in enrolment were in the southern part of the school district, board chairman Allan McKinnon suggested the board look carefully at additions to schools there.

"We're going to have rooms coming out of our ears if we're not very careful," he said.

Total enrolment in the district is down 610 this year from the 1970 school population of 32,231.

CRASH KILLS NANAIMO MAN

Paul Dixon Woram, 23, of Nanaimo, was killed and his sister critically injured Tuesday when their light airplane crashed in the mountains east of Kyburz, Calif.

Sheriff's deputies said Janet Woram, 20, was transferred to a Sacramento hospital where she was reported in critical condition today.

The two were en route from Placerville to Reno, Nev.

Officers said the Cessna 150, owned by Victoria Flying Services Ltd., crashed near Eagle Rock across the south fork of the American River from Kyburz. The area is about 65 miles east of Sacramento.

'Greatest' Logger

Competing recently in the North American open championship at the Pacific National Exhibition's Festival of Forestry, Brian Herlihy of Sooke won the George "Panicky" Bell trophy as "the greates logger of them all."

To those in the forest industry the title recalls memories of a tough, skilful man who in a career spanning more than 40 years earned the reputation of B.C.'s greatest logger, a man who could do any job well.

Bell who died in 1960 at 59, was superintendent at both Northwest Bay on Vancouver Island and for the Powell River Company at Arco Camp. His quick temper and dislike of sloppy work brought him the nickname "Panicky."

The trophy was named after Bell by the forestry advisory committee to the PNE because his name was synonymous with B.C. Logging.

Family Course In N. Saanich

A six-session course stressing communication within the family will begin Sept. 30 at North Saanich junior high, 10475 Macdonald Park Road.

Offered by the continuing education division of the Saanich school board and entitled Communication and Human Relations, each session will feature a guest speaker followed by small discussion groups.

A session will be held each Thursday night at the school.

Public Education and the Public

TO BENEFIT EVERYONE, public education must be more than something established from above, without reference to the people it is supposed to serve. Public education must involve the public in deciding its aims.

SCHOOL BOARDS were created to maintain this link between the public and the education system. The school board is a fundamental part of Canadian democracy. But as communities grow, elected representatives cannot maintain personal contacts with everyone. Greater Victoria School District now has about 164,000 residents, with 32,000 school children and 1,400 teachers — the second-largest system in B.C.

THE GREATER VICTORIA SCHOOL BOARD believes that new methods are needed to preserve a basic democracy in our school system. To achieve this the Board will not abdicate its decision-making role, but it will require better channels of information from the community. Better information means better decisions.

THIS IS WHY the Board has authorized Citizens' Advisory Committees to the trustees. When the Board requires public opinion on a specific topic, it will seek it through a Citizens' Advisory Committee. Or, a committee can be authorized by the Board at the request of the community through a significant expression of interest in any educational topic.

THE PURPOSE of these committees will be to inform the Greater Victoria School Board of the educational wishes of the whole community. Everyone with a point of view will be invited to express it: parents, non-parents, students, businessmen, labor, educators, the professions. As well as performing its own research, a Citizens' Advisory Committee will be open to letters, phone calls, briefs and informal opinions, and will report to the Board.

AS A DIRECT LINK between community and School Board, a trustee will sit on every Citizens' Advisory Committee.

IN THE NEAR FUTURE the School Board will authorize one or more committees. As well, the Board will consider proposals for other committees. For details on Citizens' Advisory Committees to the Greater Victoria School Board, phone or write the Board's Community Information Office.

HOME GARDEN

Prime Month for Making Selection

By HILDA BEASTALL

The time for amateur gardeners to choose plants with which they are not completely familiar, is at the time when the plants are at their greatest decorative value. This usually does not coincide with availability for buying and planting in the garden; but by making a choice from flowering plants, recording names, heights, colors and other pertinent information, the amatture is able to increase his scope.

Hilda

September is the prime month for choosing dahlias and chrysanthemums, with plenty of opportunities for visiting display gardens where the plants are growing, and many flower shows where cut blooms are displayed in competition.

These outdoor displays and the shows are open to the public, with moderate admissions charged to the shows but not to gardens.

While the new gardener may be overwhelmed by size of some of the flowers seen on show tables, among both dahlias and chrysanthemums, hundreds of named varieties will be found of types and sizes perfectly suited to average gardens.

An added advantage of the samller sizes is that they are also more readily used in lovely arrangements in average homes.

In dahlias, exquisite pastel shades of pink and apricot are to be found in the group of minatures. These have flowers also four inches in diameter, with the greatest perfection of form imaginable. Against their dark green foliage, the pastel shades leave nothing left to be desired as garden decoration.

These and six to eight inch cactus type are resistant to wind and rain which plague growers of giant sized flowers.

The same applies to chrysanthemums. Medium flowered types, disbudded to give five to six-inch flowers, and the splendid spray types also partially disbudded, are fine choices for garden color being scarcely affected by rain and wind.

A certain amount of careful staking in the early stage of the plants' growth will provide sufficient support for the numerous stems, and is not noticeable by flowering time.

As well as bringing dominant color to the garden for September and early October (according to varieties chosen), cut flowers are produced in abundance on both dahlias and chrysanthemums. By thinning out the blooms for use in the house, the garden display is benefited.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

As all bridge players know, correct defensive play is much more difficult than correct declarer's play. The major reason for this is that declarer, when he is playing out a hand, sees his dummy; and hence he knows what his combined assets are. Thus it is relatively easy for him to formulate, and put into action, a plan of attack.

The defenders, on the other hand, do not see each other's cards. Hence they have to rely on conventional leads, signals, imagination, and, very often, guesswork. Since they are frequently operating in the blind, the defenders' task is a rough one.

In today's deal, it required very neat and co-operative defensive play to bring about declarer's defeat. The defenders came through nicely. Neither side vulnerable. East deals.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1♣	1♡	Pass	2♡
Pass	4♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♣.

South's four-heart bid was an overbid, but he would have gotten away with it had not the defence been excellent.

Dummy's five of clubs was played on West's opening club lead and East captured the trick with his 10-spot, South dropping the six. To trick two, East cashed the club king, South following with the eight.

It was rather obvious that South still possessed the club nine; if West had held the 9-3-2 of clubs, he would have led the nine-spot at trick one. Based on this appreciation, East made the "killing" lead at trick three: he led the four of clubs.

West, of course, realized that East still had the ace of clubs, and that he was deliberately underleading the ace to get West to trump (if East had led the ace, West might well have discarded a diamond, since there would seem to be no point in trumping). So West ruffed with the four-spot, to get dummy to expend the jack. Of course, dummy overruffed the four with the jack.

East now had to make a trump trick, with his K-10 over dummy's remaining Q-3; and, in time, declarer lost a spade trick, to incur a one-trick set. Had West not ruffed with the four-spot, declarer would have avoided the loss of a trump trick by finessing successfully against East's king. He would, in this case, have fulfilled his contract, losing just two clubs and a spade.

We have 1668 for the game today. That's one 1, two 6's, and an 8. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation (that's not the simple plus) or factorial symbols. Don't forget decimals, powers and roots (no extra digits). For example, 61 — 8 + 6 is a solution for 59.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 104. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send hints to help in future games if requested.

Yesterday's answer: DOG was 194.

SCHOOLS HAVE COMMON BOND

GREENVILLE, Ohio (UPI) — Greenville and Celina high schools have something in common.

Their school colors are green and white and their school superintendents have the same last name — Potts.

Harold Potts has served as superintendent of both schools and Everett Potts holds the same distinction. The schools are 32 miles apart and the men are close friends but not related.

NEEDLE COPIES A SURE SIGN OF SUCCESS

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — Seattle's No. 1 tourist attraction, the 607-foot Space Needle, has been copied from San Antonio to Calgary. But manager George Johnson doesn't mind.

"We love it," he says. "It's a sign of success."

Since its construction for the Seattle World's Fair nine years ago, the Space Needle has drawn millions of visitors, including the Shah of Iran and Prince Philip of Britain.

WEDDINGS TAKE PLACE

It has been a favorite spot for publicity seekers, and Johnson says he remembers only too well the time a group of Chinese hung a 200-foot long string of firecrackers down the side of the needle to celebrate the Chinese New Year.

"We were cleaning up for two weeks afterward," Johnson recalled Tuesday.

At least six weddings and "hundreds" of engagements have taken place in the restaurant-lounge atop the needle.

The restaurant-lounge, which seats 280, revolves once an hour on a ballbearing track driven by a one-horsepower motor, smaller than the motor in most home vacuum cleaners.

One clear days, the restaurant offers a spectacular view of Puget Sound, the Cascade and Olympic mountains and the entire city.

Alberta Navy

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government now has a navy: a fleet of two $51,000 vessels designed to cut the weeds that choke many of the province's lakes and hamper recreation. The fleet consists of a harvester which operates on the same principle as a land-bound combine and a carrier, which takes the weeds to shore.

Harrison Album Voted Best

LONDON (AP) — Beatle George Harrison's My Sweet Lord was voted best single record of the year Wednesday in both the international and British sections of the Melody Maker poll.

The Melody Maker is Britain's largest-circulation music paper. It said readers taking part in the poll ranged from ordinary fans to music business executives.

For the first time since they rocketed to global fame in 1963, the Beatles as a group failed to win a place in the listings.

Harrison, Paul McCartney and Ringo Starr chalked up individual successes, but John Lennon, once widely regarded as the top Beatle, did not rate a mention in any section.

Harrison's All Things Must Pass, a triple-record album, won fourth place in the album-of-the-year British section, and sixth place in the international section. Starr rated fourth place in the drummer-of-the-year category.

Emerson, Oake and Palmer, who last year were voted Britain's brightest hope before they had even played a note together in public, displaced Led Zeppelin as Britain's top group. Their second album, Tarkus, was voted British album of the year.

First Recital On Friday

First in a series of nine recitals by Trio Victoria will be presented Friday at 8 p.m. at Craigdarroch Castle.

The Trio, which consists of Sydney Humphreys, violin; James Hunter, cello, and Robin Wood, piano, was heard and seen in practice and performance on CBC-TV last Sunday.

Their program, Friday, consists of Brahms and Franck violin sonatas and the Mozart Trio in E major, K. 542.

There is no admission charge for the recitals but donations for the Victoria Conservatory of Music bursary fund will be appreciated.

Bi and Bi Research Reports Said 'Too Hot' to Be Released

OTTAWA (CP) — The royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism got in its licks at press, radio and television before it formally expired this year.

It was beaten to the publishing punch by Senator Keith Davey's report on the media and shunted its research reports to the public archives.

One of these reports, entitled A Survey of the Press in Canada by S. D. Gagne, is considered so "hot" that it will not be opened to public view until 1996.

Also under the 25-year ban are at least three other commission research reports, including one on the South African armed forces and another entitled A Case Study of the Takeover of Shawinigan Water and Power by the Quebec Government.

In all, the commission sent 159 unpublished research reports to the archives, including at least five on press, radio and television. The reports are mainly critical.

HARD TO GET

For instance, Prof. Donald Gordon in a 1966 report on national news in Canadian newspapers says that readers cannot readily obtain information "in balance and context about the nation as a whole."

He and his research staff carried out a day-to-day survey of 20 newspapers between Jan. 11 and June 30, 1965.

He says the French-language papers are preoccupied with the affairs of the Quebec "nation" while the English-language press tends to be preoccupied "with their nation too."

Prof. Neil Compton, in a 1965 report on biculturalism and the English-language media, says that despite The Canadian Press "the front pages of daily newspapers still reflect the view that a dogfight on Main St. should take precedence over riots in Athens and earthquakes in Japan."

He says the English-language media are dominated by the advertising industry, a serious threat, he says, to "national consciousness."

He says 'confusion' in the CBC is due to the "incompatibility of the corporation's aims with conditions under which it must raise much of its income."

Prof. Compton adds:

"The CBC, that instrument of enlightened Canadian nationalism, cannot or dare not plan its fall television schedule until after the American networks have announced theirs."

French-speaking Canadians, he urges, should have access to services of all media in French, "whether they live in Vercheres or Vancouver."

In a huge two-volume study dated 1966, Mrs. Jean Bruce says that in the 1955-65 decade the "over-all news pattern" changed so that political-social-economic news represented almost half of the total amount of news published.

Political-social-economic news ranked first, followed by sports, crime, accidents, education and entertaintment in that order.

There had been a "significant increase" in the amount of Quebec news carried in the papers of other provinces. Between 1955 and 1965 Montreal La Presse and Quebec Le Soleil had doubled their coverage of the English-speaking provinces.

PAPERS ARE REGIONAL

Basically, however, Canadian newspapers are regional in their coverage, Mrs. Bruce says.

British Columbia papers published little about the other provinces except Quebec, Ontario and Alberta.

The Prairie papers concentrated on Quebec, Ontario and neighboring provinces. The Ontario papers emphasized Quebec and western news while Quebec papers' coverage of other-province news was dominated by Ontario.

Papers in the Atlantic region gave preedence to Quebec, Ontario and neighboring provinces.

The major source of news about every province was The Canadian Press.

U.S. Farmers Back Freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States farm leaders meeting with President Nixon on how to control inflation have called for an end to the 10-percent supplementary duty on imports as soon as possible.

But the group, following labor and business contingents to White House conferences, said Tuesday there also is a need for controls on wages and prices after the current 90-day freeze ends.

White House press spokesman Gerald L. Warren said the farm leaders agreed "to a man there should be a follow-on procedure" to restrain wages and prices in the post-freeze period.

The Cost of Living Council, meanwhile, softened its stand on dividends, which—though not frozen—were requested by the president to be controlled voluntarily.

The council said companies may increase year-end dividends if they have done so in each of the last three years, but the increases cannot exceed those past increases.

Mr. T. Balshaw
Eaton's Furrier
can add Years of Wear and Modern Styling
to your Old Fur Coat,
Meet Him at Our Salon
Thurs., Fri., and Sat.,
Sept. 16th, 17th and 18th

Fur, we all know, never goes out of date. But fur coat styling can . . .

Lining will age. And a few rips occur, but that's no reason to give up what was initially a large investment. Mr. Balshaw will be in our Fur Department, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week to advise you on how to remodel your old fur. He can make it into a contemporary dream or just make minor adjustments. After 25 years in the Fur Trade, Mr. Balshaw knows just what to look for and how much alteration can be done. He knows all the hidden secrets on how to revitalize what may have become your second-choice coat.

For Example: A full length, large collar coat with large sleeves and cuffs, matted fur, a few rips and old lining can become a modern trotter of the latest styling. Cleaned, back grooved, with modern lining. And, maybe, if sufficient fur is left over, you can have a bonus cape to set off another ensemble.

Another Example: Our skilled furrier can counsel you as to how to achieve the style of your choice from an old, but still good fur with "football" shoulders, flared back and "parachute" sleeves.

Reliable counsel backed by years of experience.
With no obligation to you.

Meet Mr. Balshaw

Thursday and Friday—7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m.

Bootstrap Operation First for Quebecers

CABANO, Que. (CP) — It's been a tough, uphill climb, but a unique fund-raising campaign to provide jobs may at last offer hope of good times and prosperity for the residents of this troubled community on the western edge of the Gaspe.

Cabano's 3,000 citizens are devoting all their efforts to raising $2.5 million — their contribution to construction of a new cardboard mill expected to be in full swing creating 500 jobs and stimulating service industries, by 1973.

It marks the first time that residents of a Quebec community have been asked to finance an industry that will directly support them.

Cabano was just another pulp town until 1966 when a fire swept through Fraser Brothers sawmill and wiped out 350 jobs.

For the next four years the community subsisted on unrealized promises for new industry and welfare payments.

D'Auteuil Lumber, owned by New Brunswick industrialist K. C. Irving, had acquired a large wood cutting concession on Lake Temiscouata bordering Cabano, in exchange for a commitment to build a wallboard plant.

RIGHTS SUSPENDED

By summer 1970 there were still no signs the plant was going to be built, but D'Auteuil broke the stalemate by trying to haul wood from the concession to mills in nearby New Brunswick.

Outraged Cabano residents set up roadblocks and finally provoked the Quebec government into suspending the wood-cutting rights until the plant was actually constructed.

The Irving project faded away, but the Societe Populaire des Pates et Papiers du Quebec — a pulp and paper co-operative set up by the Catholic Farmers' Union — had in the meantime investigated Cabano as a site for a wood-processing plant and made the residents this offer:

If they contributed $2.5 million toward a $31-million mill, the union, through government development grants, long-term loans on the European market and $7.5 million in stock issues, would provide the rest of the financing.

In return, contributors would be given preferred stock with a guaranteed six-per-cent interest and the right to withdraw capital at any time.

Any resident, not just employees, could have a say in, and benefit financially from, operation of the mill.

The project was enthusiastically accepted and a fund-raising campaign, launched in July, picked up $130,000 the first week.

Memories of the 1966 fire and a blaze in 1950 which destroyed most of Cabano's commercial establishments and 113 homes were shoved into the background in light of the new development.

Societe President Roger Morasse says long-term contracts for the bulk of the mill's projected production have already been signed in Belgium and France — fruit of a promotion drive headed last winter by a Quebec government development agency.

The mill is expected to produce 150,000 tons of cardboard, provide 267 jobs inside and another 225 in the forests.

An estimated $2.3 million will be paid in salaries and another $2.8 million to local wood producers during the first year of operation.

Cabano Mayor Guy Michaud is confident his people will find their $2.5-million share. But even if they don't, he adds, the mill will be built anyway.

Before the Judge

George C. Schulz, 21, of Vancouver, was fined $250 or ordered to spend 21 days in jail after he pleaded guilty in provincial court Tuesday to a charge of possession of narcotics.

Police said Schulz was arrested at 140 Ontario St. Sept. 5. He had marijuana and a hypodermic syringe in his possession.

There were needle marks on one arm, police said.

Schultz chose the fine and was ordered to pay the fine in $50 monthly instalments.

Larry F. Marcotte, a Colwood fisherman, was fined a total of $550 after he pleaded guilty to charges of impaired driving and refusing to take a blood-alcohol breath test.

Marcotte was arrested at 3 a.m. Tuesday on Goldstream Avenue. His driver's licence was suspended indefinitely.

Douglas A. Bobier, 22, of Sooke, was fined $250 after he pleaded guilty to attempted theft of T-shirts worth $2.98 from The Bay Saturday.

Bobier was given a month to pay the fine. A store security officer said the accused had $50 in his possession when he was apprehended.

William Powell, a bouncer in a downtown hotel, was fined $50 for striking a patron during an argument. He was charged with common assault.

Ambulance Delay Attacked

Investigations are being conducted at police, city and provincial levels into an ambulance-call conflict in connection with a stabbing death on the Victoria-Saanich border Friday.

Donald Lynn Williams, 26, died after he was stabbed in his rooming house at 840 Tolmie.

CALLED OFF

Saanich police have been criticized for calling off a Victoria city ambulance which was in sight of the death scene. Police records show Saanich officers were called to the house, then telephoned for a Saanich fire department ambulance, rejecting the Victoria vehicle.

A Saanich police spokesman said the matter was being looked into, and agreed the boundary between the cities is a "grey area" where police, fire and ambulance calls are concerned.

"We have to admit that in some cases it could be the difference between life and death," the spokesman said. "In this particular case, we understand the wound was of such a nature that it wouldn't have mattered if the man had been stabbed on the operating table. There was no chance of survival."

'NO GREY AREA'

Victoria Police Chief Jack Gregory denied there was a grey area in coverage between the two cities.

"It was a matter of seconds in this case . . . the two ambulances must have been in sight of each other," Gregory said.

"No matter how it turns out the public is being well served."

A spokesman for Garden City Ambulance, which has the emergency service contract with Victoria, said there was "nothing to say" on the matter from the firms point of view.

He declined comment on a suggestion that the firm had started the call conflict because Garden City would not be paid for their aborted run to the Tolmie address because it was not a "completed" call.

PROBE PLEDGE

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock, visiting ailing Ald. Robert Baird in Seattle, said he would launch an investigation into the dispute when he returned.

Attorney-General Les Peterson and Provincial Secretary Wes Black also said they had asked for details of the event.

'McGovern Met Cong'-Police

SAIGON (Reuter) — United States Senator George McGovern could face up to six months jail for attending a meeting Tuesday night allegedly attended by Viet Cong agents and radical anti-U.S. students, Saigon Police Chief Trang Si Tan said today.

The police chief said a final decision on whether charges will be made against the anti-war senator will be taken after a fuller investigation.

Said McGovern:

"If there were Viet Cong at the meeting why was I not told?

"If the police chief knew Viet Cong agents were present why are they allowed to roam around the city? It is all unbelievable."

McGovern met later with President Nguyen Van Thieu and said he protested the allegation as a "personal insult."

McGovern was scheduled to leave Saigon for Tokyo Thursday morning.

"I think Mr. McGovern will leave Vietnam before the investigation is completed and the court decides if charges should be made," Tan said.

Tan also said it is possible McGovern is immune from prosecution under a South Vietnamese and U.S. convention regarding punishment of U.S. offenders of Vietnamese law.

Seven-Day Ultimatum Ignored by IBEW

Electrical workers employed by B.C. Hydro have ignored a seven-day ultimatum to agree to an arbitrator for their long-running dispute, but there was no indication today whether the Crown corporation would take court action to have an arbitrator appointed.

The notice served on Local 258 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers under tems of the Arbitation Act expired at noon Tuesday, but Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum said Tuesday night the union had until noon today to make up its mind.

The choice is to agree to a mutually satisfactory arbitrator or be taken to court and have a judge appointed.

'NOT VALID'

In a telephone interview from Vancouver shortly before the noon deadline today, union business agent Doug Cronk said the IBEW had ignored the ultimatum which it regards as "not a valid procedure."

He added: "We are waiting now for the authority to say what they are going to do in this regard. We really have no idea what they are going to do."

Meanwhile, Shrum was giving away no hint as to whether Hydro would carry out its threat to seek a court-appointed judge as arbitrator.

Asked if this action was planned he replied: "I can't say. There is no comment on that."

French-Speaking Students Block Ontario School

STURGEON FALLS, Ont. (CP)—A sit-in by about 250 French-speaking students and parents continued at Sturgeon Falls secondary school as classes began today.

The demonstrators confined their sit-in Tuesday night to the school cafeteria as police had asked. But today, some students blocked the main hallway.

Sturgeon Falls police escorted teachers past the demonstrators and into the building, but some teachers gave up trying to enter and went home.

A meeting was to be held in Toronto later today between Education Minister Robert Welch, officials of the Nippissing board of education and student leader Jean St. Louis.

French-speaking students in this predominantly French-speaking community of 7,000 have been on strike since Sept. 7 to back demands for separate schools for French and English-speaking students. See earlier story on Page 39.

ALDERMAN IRATE OVER 'DANCING GIRL'

A sketch of a scantily-clad dancing girl, intended to introduce a certain note of enticing warmth into the, uh, festivities at the B.C. Municipalities Convention here has caused only cold shoulders so far.

Ald. George McKnight, a serious-minded delegate from Port Alberni, took an indignant look at the sketch and said: "I'm not interested in seeing a dancing girl in Victoria."

The offending sketch, with accompanying message, came from the Victoria Committee responsible for entertainment of delegates to the conference.

The message: "It is not expected that the little girl on the side of this building will be at the business sessions but you may be fortunate enough o meet her at one of our social events."

That, retorted McKnight, gave the heinous impression that the convention is "nothing but a big party."

He for one wanted it known that "more serious business," and not monkey business either, faces the convention.

Victoria Ald. Ove Witt, vice-chairman of the convention committee, said the bulletin was meant to add some "light homor" to the city's reception invitations.

Anyway, he added, it only referred to one social event. He did not elaborate on which one and other delegates were discreetly silent as well.

Air Price War Near As Agreement Fails

GENEVA (CP) — International control over fares major airlines charge for transatlantic flights will end Feb. 1, the International Air Transport Association announced today.

Lufthansa, the West German airline, immediately announced that it will offer cheaper fares than all other scheduled airlines for the run.

Air Canada said in Montreal it will "remain fully competitive" with the transatlantic air fares offered by any other airline.

Announcement of the end of controls came after the major airlines failed to agree on new standard rates applicable to all lines flying the North Atlantic route.

The German airline said its excursion fares would be lower than those offered by other scheduled airlines.

Lufthansa said its basic excursion fare would be $215.10 off-season from Frankfurt to New York and $276.50 in the high season.

Other members of the International Air Transport Association have agreed to a return excursion fare of $230 off-season and $280 in the high season from Frankfurt to New York.

CURTIS BLASTS VICTORIA ALDERMEN

'Mercenary Attitude' Attacked

Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich today attacked what he called "a mercenary attitude" on the part of Victoria aldermen who Tuesday opposed turning Thetis Lake Park into a permanent natural playground.

Members of city council's B committee stated they want to preserve their options, which include selling the park to the regional government and subdividing the 40 acres that lie south of the Island highway.

Speaking as chairman of the capital district regional board, Curtis said: "If this is interpreted as interference into the affairs of Victoria, then I'm sorry."

"But the point has to be made that the Greater Victoria area needs more parkland, not less, and it seems an unfortunate contradiction, at a time when the regional district, Saanich and other municipalities are buying parkland and open space that the city even gives the slightest consideration of reducing its park acreage at Thetis," Curtis said.

"I'm saddened by the apparent mercenary attitude in the city. Parkland does not belong on a balance sheet. It is an asset that should not be preceded by a dollar sign."

Curtis pointed out that the regional district has acquired almost 3,000 acres of parkland in the past five years.

Nuclear Test Going Ahead

HE'LL QUIT IF AID CUT

SAIGON (Reuters) — President guyen Van Thieu said today he will resign if U.S. aid is cut off over his decision to run alone for re-election Oct. 3.

The possibility of aid being cut off as a demonstration of Washington's misgivings over the non-contested vote is slight, diplomatic sources in Saigon said.

Rough Year Ahead, UBCM Told

B.C. municipalities are in for a rough year of labor negotiations in 1972, the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention was told here today.

UBCM executive director Theo Adams said at the convention's opening session there is "sufficient unrest" amongst municipal employees in the province "to portend the shape of things to come."

Adams said almost 100 municipal work agreements are open for negotiation next year and the economic problems of the country have not prevented employees from seeking wage and salary increases.

The convention was also told B.C.'s municipal finances are being "strained in a grim and rather frightening manner."

FAST GROWING

UBCM president Henry Anderson, mayor of Richmond, said the union's financial analysis released last spring showed what municipal officials have "known for some time."

Earlier, provincial minister without portfolio Grace McCarthy disagreed with Anderson, saying B.C.'s local governments were more stable and faster growing than any others in Canada.

Mrs. McCarthy also called on municipalities to set up their own committees to fight drug abuse, saying provincial financial help cannot do the job alone, but must have active support at the community level.

Adams told the convention the 1971 negotiations were less hectic than 1970's, and the settlements have averaged increases of 8.2 per cent this year compared to 8.3 per cent last year.

However, many settlements are not completed and the final figures may change "noticeably when full details are available."

Adams said "one disturbing aspect" of negotiations this year has been a rising number of rejections by union membership of their negotiators' recommendations. This has placed a "great strain" on the system of collective bargaining, he said.

Anderson recalled that the provincial government had backed out of an agreement to participate in the UBCM's financial analysis, known as the Plunkett report, threatening to make the study "an exercise in futility."

The study showed costs of services like education and welfare have been rising at a rate that causes other services to suffer, while municipalities receive provincial grants, insufficient to soften the blow.

No Order to Halt On Amchitka, Says AEC

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP)—The Aatomic Energy Commission says preparations for an underground five-megaton nuclear test on Amchitka Island are proceeding on schedule, despite strong opposition and speculation President Nixon may cancel it.

David G. Jackson, deputy director of the AEC office of public affairs, said the 5,875-foot shaft has been drilled and workers are "on schedule and making the final preparations for the test."

No specific date has been set, but Jackson said it still is "tentatively scheduled for early October."

The Senate and House of Representatives in Washington agreed Tuesday on a provision in a public works appropriation bill that would forbid detonation of the device, code-named Cannikin, before May 31, 1972, without Nixon's direct approval.

But Jackson says "that's the way it is on any major test, particularly off the Nevada test site—that's the usual procedure, that the president has to give his approval."

The site of what would be the largest underground blast ever detonated in North America is a barren island halfway between Anchorage and Tokyo at the confluence of the Bering Sea and Pacific Ocean.

Some observers feel that President Nixon may cancel the blast when he meets Japanese Emperor Hirohito in Alaska on Sept. 25. Such a move would be taken throughout the Pacific as an act of goodwill.

Meanwhile the Don't Make A Wave Committee in Vancouver today sent off its protest ship the Greenpeace on which 12 people will cruise just off the coast of Amchitka on the day of the scheduled blast. See page 34.

Hostages Not Shot By Prisoners

Times News Services

ATTICA, N.Y. — State Corrections Commissioner Russell Oswald today confirmed that gunshots killed nine hostages but was not certain how it happened.

But he also confirmed no guns of any kind were found among the prisoners after troops used gunfire to halt a four-day uprising of rebellious convicts.

Gov. Nelson Rockefeller today ordered a full investigation.

Conference Postponed

The governor said he will fly to the capitol in Albany Thursday to confer with legislative leaders on the Attica situation.

In a statement to reporters late Tuesday, Oswald said one question was how any of the hostages could have been killed by gunfire.

"The most important and obvious answer is the fact that the inmates had dressed all hostages in prison garb to ensure difficulty of identification between inmate and hostage," he said.

"Additionally, hostages could very well have been used as shields or forced forward into gunfire to suggest that they were not hostages and could have been mistaken for such because of their prison garb."

He released a list of weapons found in the prison after the rebellious convicts were routed. The list included gasoline bombs, sharpened spears, metal pipes, straight razors and spiked baseball bats—but no guns.

He declined to answer questions from reporters.

No Throats Cut

The commissioner's statement came several hours after disclosure by Dr. John F. Edland, Monroe County medical examiner, that the hostages all died of gunshot wounds and that none had had his throat slashed.

"There were no cut throats or any kind of mutilation," Dr. Edland said after examining eight bodies of hostages. "All eight cases died of gunshot wounds."

A ninth hostage killed during the assault had previously been established as a gunshot victim.

Oswald maintained that "there have been two misstatements of facts" concerning what happened to the hostages. He said the first was that all the hostages had cut throats and the second was that none had a slashed throat.

During the evacuation of the dead and wounded after the assault, Oswald said, "a number of those evacuated had slashed throats. . . ."

He offered no further elaboration and did not mention any source of information other than the report of the forensic pathologist, a reference to Dr. Edland.

Heat of Situation

Oswald said one reason for the erroneous reports about throats being slit was that several corrections officers "positively stated that they had been seen hostages dropped as their throats were apparently being cut."

He added that there was confusion when 30 other hostages were evacuated and that those involved reported in the heat of the situation things that might have been erroneous.

IT WILL WORK

The Reid Centre —Time to Begin

Yes, please, count me in all the way with those non-vocalizing citizens who are solidly for the so-called Reid Centre and wish to heaven they'd bloody well get on with it.

If I appear more than ordinarily irascible on the subject it's simply because I chanced to take out my own Victorian citizenship papers at precisely the time the project first became a possibility, followed its ups and downs assiduously and marvelled at the emotion-charged delaying tactics that continue to put in jeopardy what might be one of our town's most attractive — and most-needed — ornaments.

Much of the clamoring opposition from a small section of the public, it seems to me, has been fired by people who are as well-meaning and as fanatical as anti-vivisectionists. There's nothing quite so disagreeable as bluntly disagreeing with a man whose motives are pure, but whose reasoning is rooted in blind prejudice. Yet surely the time is over-due to recognize what a menace they are to the immediate and long-range future of this nicest of all cities.

jack scott

If the Reid Centre goes belly-up it will go belly-up because of a very small minority of citizens who have a passionate, paranoic hatred of high buildings — any and all high buildings, regardless of their site or the pressing need for them.

Like all of us — those who have spent their lives here and those of us who have elected to join them — they yearn to keep Victoria a quaint, quiet, slow-paced village. It is a nostalgia syndrome for the days of the horse-and-buggy and the squire in his ivy-covered mansion and a quality of life that, regretably, has already passed.

In a city where, almost anywhere, you may walk 10 paces to the left or right to open up sybaritic views of sea, sky and mountain, they hysterically oppose any kind of man-made structure that might make them walk an extra five paces.

In the interests of that single-minded, hopeless cause many of these opponents are willing to sabotage the vision and plans of highly-qualified men whose love of the city is equally deep.

To keep out the skyscrapers they are willing to live with a sprawl that will shove the city's borders into beautiful countryside that can never be reclaimed, a low-profile sprawl that could engulf this whole lower corner of Vancouver Island.

To keep out the skyscrapers they are willing to live with the two, three or four-storey apartment buildings that already proliferate the city and its suburbs, the squat, ugly characterless frame slabs that are so often no more than a tax-haven for investors without a thought for the city's esthetics.

To keep out the skyscrapers they are willing to see the slow death of the city's inner core, the downtown heart of the place that's already in an advanced state of strangulation. The very juices of the city, the sophistication, the invitation to fun and culture and social intercourse that give a city meaning, are all but dried-up in Victoria, a tomb when the office workers leave it behind.

To keep out the skyscrapers they are willing to delay indefinitely, perhaps for decades, the usefulness and beautification of the city's Inner Harbor, a sickening industrial junkyard. The face we turn to the world is a hideous one of squalor. (A story about this: In the planning department at city hall they put up a strip of pictures of the harbor's bleak, shabby skyline taken from the water. When Mayor Courtney Haddock chanced by he remarked, "Marvellous what they could do with pictures in those old days, eh?" And he was told: "It was taken last Thursday.")

No one suggests that the Reid Centre is a magic answer to all of the present or foreseable problems, but it is the one sensible, imaginative beginning to answering many of them, a project securely within the control of the city's planning department, yet demanding the initiative of private capital.

It will be the beginning of the long-delayed program of urban renewal in the Inner Harbor where some 80 per cent of the waterfrontage, from the Bapco Paint plant to the Johnson Street Bridge, may be developed over the years under public authority.

It will mean the beginning of a new dynamism in the stagnating city core. Stand in Bastion Square today and look at that blighted harbor front, a place everyone tries to avoid showing to a visitor. Imagine those splendid towers and promenades where you may stroll the esplanades and dine in a penthouse restaurant that will open a distant view of the Straits and the snow-capped Olympics, where you may sip an aperitif on the terrace and watch the ships passing by, a place where a theatre, shops, boutiques, a marina, hotel and apartments, a social centre will inject an adrenelin shot of humanity into the downtown cemetery. On its own, it will be a beginning to making us a 16-hour-a-day city, as Lewis Mumford sees the ideal, rather than an eight-hour-a-day city.

It will surely be the beginning to attract more developments that must come in an area that every projection indicates must accommodate a population that will grow to more than a quarter of a million people within the next 15 years, a growth that will force the whole area from Sidney to Sooke into new concepts of satellite towns, green belts and the rest. Eventually we will have to face the fact, faced by every fast-growing city in the world, that when you can no longer go out you dam'd well have to go up.

That this will mean a great, massive conglomerate of megastructures thrusting to the sky, as the highrise paranoics would have us believe, is simply nonsense.

However steady our demographic growth may be Victoria will never be another Manhattan, not even another Vancouver. Moreover, in all of Canada no city has more legislation to protect us from indiscriminate highrises (Vancouver's West End, for example has twice the density that will be permissible here) and a planning staff of unquestioned ability dedicated to the proposition that a beautiful and exciting skyline need not mean an end to the quality of life we think is uniquely our own.

By every test the Reid Centre, both in its original and present concept (though I prefer the original) is just exactly what this city needs. Let's get on with it.

Ever-Changing Meanings of Words Poses Problem in Bilingual Canada

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

In the small hours of every night while Parliament is in session translaters wrestle the official record, Hansard, into both English and French.

Help is on the way from Victoria.

The problem is languages won't hold still, says Jean-Paul Vinay. They sprout new words and shed others so fast any dictionary is left behind from the day it first appears.

(Module, astronaut and a host of other words arrived with the space age ... perambulator, mackinaw and many others have drifted off).

Then there are the words which change their meanings.

(Fond used to mean foolish, stupid. To "table" a report has opposite meanings in Britain and the U.S.)

So the people who assemble dictionaries — lexicographers — can never win. And in Canada, with two official languages, they can be excused for having fits. Because Canadian English and French don't change simultaneously or unanimously.

And if all this isn't enough, English usage (not to mention prounciation and spelling) in Canada doesn't always match the English of Britain or the United States. And the French of Quebec City has some startling differences from the French of Paris.

The head of Uvic's linguistics department points out that the French words for vest and jacket have opposite meanings in those two capitals.

And the word for overcoat in Paris means snowshoes in Montreal, as the word for slippers in Montreal means socks in France.

Apart from economic or social considerations, with the politics of Canada debated in two languages, rapid and accurate translation is an immediate and practical problem, says Vinay.

What is needed is some central source of bilingual information, one which can somehow keep up to date. A word bank.

There are word banks now, in Montreal and Ottawa, but they have been slow to develop. Vinay and his colleagues, on campus and in Eastern Canada, are working on the two phases of the problem — gathering word information and how to keep up with the country's languages.

With Bruce Kallio of IBM Canada Ltd., Vinay has written a report on the first phase of a project called Lexautom, a study of how words could be coded and retrieved in a computerized bilingual dictionary.

The space an entire dictionary would take in the memory bank of a computer makes the project impractical at present. But Vinay says technology advances will eventually solve this. Meanwhile, smaller computerized dictionaries covering technical fields may come first.

The ultimate system he predicts will be a word bank linked over any distance by telex. The translator dials his query, a code in English or French, the computer sifts its up-to-the-moment memory, and flashes the answer back, in French or English.

Research into computerizing a word bank is apart from the task of up-dating and expanding the Canadian Dictionary, printed in 1962 with Vinay as editor-in-chief.

It is not only bilingual, definging French words in English and English words in French, it notes different usages in five spheres. Vinay explains an English world may have three different interpretations, British, Canadian and American, and a French workd, at least two, Canadian and French.

Combing the languages, to discard old words, embrace new ones, establish spelling and pronunciation, will fill the next two years, even with the help of interested students.

Vinay says the great fear of lexicographers is leaving words out. As one form of insurance his team will check every word in a selection of Canadian and European newspapers to make sure the modernized Canadian Dictionary covers them all.

Uvic Linguist Gets $24,000

Dr. Jean-Paul Vinay, head of the linguistics department at the University of Victoria, has been awarded a $24,000 grant for further research on bilingual Canadian terms and phrases, the university announced today.

The grant will cover work over the next two years to update and enlarge the Canadian dictionary, published in 1962 with Vinay as editor-in-chief.

The intention is to reprint the dictionary, expanded to perhaps 100,000 words. At the same time Vinay is researching techniques for computerizing a central word bank which would meet the problem all dictionaries face of becoming obsolete within a decade.

The $24,000 grant comes from the Donner Canadian Foundation. The foundation is particularly interested in projects related to French Canada and is one of the major supporters of interdisciplinary projects not eligible for assistance from public granting agencies.

The foundation's funds originated with William H. Donner, an American industrialist and philanthropist who died in 1953.

Vinay, a Parisian with an international reputation in linguistics, came to the University of Victoria five years ago from the University of Montreal.

The department earlier gained international recognition through the work of Uvic's Lexicographical Centre for Canadian English which, under the direction of Dr. Harry Scargill, produced the Dictionary of Canadianisms on Historical Principles in 1967.

The Centre is also headquarters for the forthcoming survey of Canadian English, to be directed by Dr. Scargill.

Warning Posted About Red Tide

Signs will be posted today at Esquimalt Lagoon warning the public that a red tide condition could be toxic to clams, a spokesman for the fisheries protection and inspection here says.

He said, however, that closure signs will not be posted because the laboratory people aren't convinced yet a toxic level exists in the lagoon.

In July, the federal fisheries service had a reading of 44 micrograms per 100 grams, which is a safe level. However, in a circular dated Sept. 7 from the federal fisheries service and received Sept. 10 by branch of the provincial government the reading had shot up to 170 micrograms, which is over the safe standard of 88 micrograms.

Don Wilson, chief of inspection for the federal fisheries service in Vancouver, said that "we don't think there is any hazard involved" at the lagoon.

He said there is reason for concern when sample results of filter-feeding shellfish like clams, oysters and mussels show a reading of over 200 micrograms.

However, he said that a close surveillance is being kept on the lagoon to see if the red tide condition continues to worsen. "We know that this history of Esquimalt Lagoon goes up and down."

He didn't know whether it had ever gone as high as 170 micrograms.

R. G. McMynn, director of the commercial fisheries for the provincial government, said "we are watching it ... but we don't get concerned until it gets up to 500 micrograms."

McMynn said that at a reading of 170 the lagoon would "only be dangerous if a person ate three meals a day of clams for 365 days a year."

He said that a committee meeting in July involving his department, the federal fisheries service, and the provincial department of health decided after some disagreement that they would start posting signs around provincial waters informing the public of the danger of red tide.

APPOINTED B.C. representative on newly-formed national port council is W. C. Mearns, 3245 Beach. A former director of the B.C. Power and Hydro Authority, Mearns was chairman of the B.C. harbours board, before being succeeded by Minister of Commercial Transport Frank Richter.

Needless Alarm Feared

He said he himself was opposed to such signs because they would create needless alarm.

The signs, which are scheduled to appear soon, state:

"Clam diggers, beware. In summer, especially warm ones, molluscs (clams, mussels and oysters) may become poisonous to humans. This poison causes paralysis and even death.

"The culprit is a minute marine orgahism which produces the complex chemical poison. This organism under certain conditions blooms or becomes so abundant that it gives rise to the so-called red tide. Molluscs, feeding on the red tide, concentrate the poison.

"Even though a surveillance program is carried on during the summer by fishery and health agenoies to forewarn the public, it is impossible to take enough samples often enough to be right up to date.

The bulletin advises clam diggers to always check red tide conditions with the nearest fishery or health official.

"In the case of clams remove the black tip of the siphon or neck before cooking (this is where a lot of the toxin is accumulated in clams). Cook well before eating, don't use the nectar. If symptoms of tingling fingertips or lips occur induce vomiting, apply artificial respiration if required and get to a doctor."

McMynn said that generally the waters are safe from Nanaimo south, but that doesn't mean it will be so next summer.

Usually, an area, once it has had a dangerous level of red tide, is closed for a year or more because clams retain the poison from anywhere from six months to two years after red tide has gone.

'Coast Look' For New Complex

A new building complex, of brick and Douglas fir with leaded glass windows, is under construction on property running from Courtney through to the liquor store on Humboldt.

Estimated cost of the project, which includes relocation of the liquor store, is between $750,000 and $1 million.

To be called Nootka Court, the structure is designed by former Victorian Wayne Wenstop, who returned from Australia four months ago after working as a town planner for an architectural-engineering company.

He has been commissioned by Hans Hartwig of Diversified Holding Ltd. who moved here from Edmonton five months ago.

Wenstop, who says the complex has been designed to create a truly west coast atmosphere "with no phoney English looks about it," says the development will be built in two parts.

LIQUOR STORE MOVE

The first phase, to be finished in the first week of November, will have the liquor store relocated on Courtney in a building with timbered interiors and hand-painted wooden signs taking the place of plastic ones.

Two wooden bridges will connect the complex with a mall running from Courtney to Humboldt, centred with a large courtyard, landscaped to complement totem poles, to be built by Tony Hunt.

Included will be 12 specialty shops and a restaurant, complete with dance floor and facilities for entertainers.

The mall and centre courtyard, which will be 50 by 60 feet, will be open to the sky to create what Wenstop hopes will be a "warm, friendly atmosphere with an open feeling to it."

Wenstop explains, "We are not building this just four tourists — it's for Victorians too. There are good shops around the city, but scattered."

Planning began two months ago and construction is expected to be completed by December.

CYCLIST DIES

A 17-year-old cyclist died in Royal Jubilee Hospital this morning as a result of injuries suffered when she was struck by a truck on the Island Highway six miles south of Nanaimo Tuesday.

Kim Loomis, of Pylades Island near Yellow Point in the Nanaimo area, was riding with three other cyclists when she was struck by a panel truck driven by Robert Rathlef of Nanaimo.

Nanaimo coroner Dr. M. J. Smart tentatively scheduled an inquest for Sept. 29.

Ask the Times

Q. Can you tell me which is the highest building in Victoria, in stories? Are there any higher buildings proposed for the city?—A.B.

A. The highest building is at 647 Michigan. Called Orchard House, it is 21 stories and was built by Westsea Construction of Vancouver. It is owned by George Mulek of Edmonton. There are no concrete plans for the construction of a higher building in Victoria.

Q. What building is being constructed on the corner of McKenzie Avenue and Cedar Hill Road?—B.J.

A. It will be a frame-construction three-storey apartment building containing 50 suites.

WHEN MY WIFE AND I came here with our children, Victoria was a comfortable little city that ambled at its own leisurely pace and let the outside world go hang. A bank at Johnson and Douglas and the grain elevator down by Ogden Point were its tallest buildings. The English overtone was strong; the pause for afternoon tea hadn't been replaced by the forenoon coffee break, and cows pastured where suburban shopping centres now stand.

The Second World War had forced a few changes. But population increase remained a mere dribble, traffic was light though antic, and property taxes had no more than begun their determined climb.

To the charmed newcomer who had turned away from the big cities, here if anywhere was the place where time stood still.

I like to remember that Victoria, though not with the longing and the resentment of any change expressed by numerous Old Victorians. Change, after all, is a law of life. It had to come. It was beginning, in fact, when we put down roots here, and it has continued.

There are times, however, when I wonder if it isn't more surface-apparent in boosted population and subdivision spread than in actual depth.

As a city, Victoria remains supremely and stubbornly insular. It is islanded in much more than a physical sense.

It does not take kindly to hustle and bustle, and it remains deeply suspicious of progress as visualized by those who would lift its face and change its ways.

There is good as well as bad in this attitude. It has so far preserved Victoria from much that would have inflicted change at the cost of great harm to its essential quality.

If its apartment buildings have multiplied, it remains a city of gardens.

It has never acquired the honky-tonk atmosphere with which so many cities on the tourist routes are cursed.

And if it has sometimes served necessity grudgingly, it has avoided at least some of the mistakes that a city in the throes of growth might have made. If Central Park was brutalized to provide space for a community swimming pool that should have gone elsewhere, Beacon Hill remains intact.

But the attitude that I've cited does have its dangers, and occasionally time in this city stands altogether too still.

The fault isn't always Victoria's. In spite of lower-level hang-ups and failures to agree, the major delays in implementing needed hospital expansion for this peninsula have resulted from provincial government reluctance to give the go-ahead.

But no senior government can be blamed for other endless-seeming dallyings with projects that should have been pushed to completion, and decisions that needed making.

That swimming pool, the cost of which increased along the way, has yet to open.

Whether you approve the building of waterfront apartment towers or not — and I most definitely don't — the Reid proposal for Inner Harbor development could surely have been dealt with decisively in less than the two years during which it has dangled before Victoria City Council.

The cautious approach is useful only to a point. Sooner or later, this over-slow reaction when a reasonable briskness is indicated will land us in trouble.

I'm not convinced, either, that old ways are necessarily best ways. Perhaps there was a time when Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Victoria proper were better served by separate municipal structures. But is that the case today?

Even though the four municipalities are represented on the Capital Regional District board, each carries on a virtually independent existence. Each makes its by-laws, levies its taxes, elects its aldermen and maintains its own municipal services.

In the past, amalgamation was a bogey-word. To many, I expect, it still is. But I suggest that it's time we took a hard look at what amalgamation might offer in the form of compact, less costly and more effective local government.

The past was good, but we are committed to the present in a city which with growth has acquired new problems. I think we should accept that fact and do more about it.

CITY-SAANICH 'GRAY AREA'

Ambulance Delay Attacked

Investigations are being conducted at police, city and provincial levels into an ambulance-call conflict in connection with a stabbing death on the Victoria-Saanich border Friday.

Donald Lynn Williams, 26, died after he was stabbed in his rooming house at 840 Tolmie.

CALLED OFF

Saanich police have been criticized for calling off a Victoria city ambulance which was in sight of the death scene. Police records show Saanich officers were called to the house, then telephoned for a Saanich fire department ambulance, rejecting the Victoria vehicle.

A Saanich police spokesman said the matter was being looked into, and agreed the boundary between the cities is a "grey area" where police, fire and ambulance calls are concerned.

"We have to admit that in some cases it could be the difference between life and death," the spokesman said. "In this particular case, we understand the wound was of such a nature that it wouldn't have mattered if the man had been stabbed on the operating table. There was no chance of survival."

'NO GREY AREA'

Victoria Police Chief Jack Gregory denied there was a grey area in coverage between the two cities.

"It was a matter of seconds in this case . . . the two ambulances must have been in sight of each other," Gregory said.

"No matter how it turns out the public is being well served."

A spokesman for Garden City Ambulance, which has the emergency service contract with Victoria, said there was "nothing to say" on the matter from the firms point of view.

He declined comment on a suggestion that the firm had started the call conflict because Garden City would not be paid for their aborted run to the Tolmie address because it was not a "completed" call.

PROBE PLEDGE

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock, visiting ailing Ald. Robert Baird in Seattle, said he would launch an investigation into the dispute when he returned.

Attorney-General Les Peterson and Provincial Secretary Wes Black also said they had asked for details of the event.

Nuclear Test Going Ahead Claims AEC

JUNEAU, Ailaska (AP)—The Atomic Energy Commission says preparations for an underground five-megaton nuclear test on Amchitka Island are proceeding on schedule, despite strong opposition and speculation President Nixon may cancel it.

David G. Jackson, deputy director of the AEC office of public affairs, said the 5,875-foot shaft has been drilled and workers are "on schedule and making the final preparations for the test."

No specific date has been set, but Jackson said it still is "tentatively scheduled for early October."

The Senate and House of Representatives in Washington agreed Tuesday on a provision in a public works appropriation bill that would forbid detonation of the device, code-named Cannikin, before May 31, 1972, without Nixon's direct approval.

But Jackson says "that's the way it is on any major test, particularly off the Nevada test site—that's the usual procedure, that the president has to give his approval."

The site of what would be the largest underground blast ever detonated in North America is a barren island halfway between Anchorage and Tokyo at the confluence of the Bering Sea and Pacific Ocean.

Some observers feel that President Nixon may cancel the blast when he meets Japanese Emperor Hirohito in Alaska on Sept. 25. Such a move would be taken throughout the Pacific as an act of goodwill.

Meanwhile the Don't Make A Wave Committee in Vancouver today sent off its protest ship the Greenpeace on which 12 people will cruise just off the coast of Amchitka on the day of the scheduled blast. See page 34.

HE'LL QUIT IF AID CUT

SAIGON (Reuters) — President guyen Van Thieu said today he will resign if U.S. aid is cut off over his decision to run alone for re-election Oct. 3.

The possibility of aid being cut off as a demonstration of Washington's misgivings over the non-contested vote is slight, diplomatic sources in Saigon said.

Rough Year Ahead, UBCM Told

B.C. municipalities are in for a rough year of labor negotiations in 1972, the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention was told here today.

UBCM executive director Theo Adams said at the convention's opening session there is "sufficient unrest" amongst municipal employees in the province "to portend the shape of things to come."

Adams said almost 100 municipal work agreements are open for negotiation next year and the economic problems of the country have not prevented employees from seeking wage and salary increases.

The convention was also told B.C.'s municipal finances are being "strained in a grim and rather frightening manner."

FAST GROWING

UBCM president Henry Anderson, mayor of Richmond, said the union's financial analysis released last spring showed what municipal officials have "known for some time."

Earlier, provincial minister without portfolio Grace McCarthy disagreed with Anderson, saying B.C.'s local governments were more stable and faster growing than any others in Canada.

Mrs. McCarthy also called on municipalities to set up their own committees to fight drug abuse, saying provincial financial help cannot do the job alone, but must have active support at the community level.

Adams told the convention the 1971 negotiations were less hectic than 1970's, and the settlements have averaged increases of 8.2 per cent this year compared to 8.3 per cent last year.

However, many settlements are not completed and the final figures may change "noticeably when full details are available."

Adams said "one disturbing aspect" of negotiations this year has been a rising number of rejections by union membership of their negotiators' recommendations. This has placed a "great strain" on the system of collective bargaining, he said.

Anderson recalled that the provincial government had backed out of an agreement to participate in the UBCM's financial analysis, known as the Plunkett report, threatening to make the study "an exercise in futility."

The study showed costs of services like education and welfare have been rising at a rate that causes other services to suffer, while municipalities receive provincial grants insufficient to soften the blow.

Production Halted

HAMILTON (CP) — A mass demonstration here today forced officials at the strike-bound Texpack Ltd. plant in Brantford to call off production for the second straight day.

Seven-Day Ultimatum Ignored by IBEW

Electrical workers employed by B.C. Hydro have ignored a seven-day ultimatum to agree to an arbitrator for their long-running dispute, but there was no indication today whether the Crown corporation would take court action to have an arbitrator appointed.

The notice served on Local 258 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers under terms of the Arbitration Act expired at noon Tuesday, but Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum said Tuesday night the union had until noon today to make up its mind.

The choice is to agree to a mutually satisfactory arbitrator or be taken to court and have a judge appointed.

In a telephone interview from Vancouver shortly before the noon deadline today, union business agent Doug Cronk said the IBEW had ignored the ultimatum which it regards as "not a valid procedure."

He added: "We are waiting now for the authority to say what they are going to do in this regard. We really have no idea what they are going to do."

Meanwhile, Shrum was giving away no hint as to whether Hydro would carry out its threat to seek a court-appointed judge as arbitrator.

Asked if this action was planned he replied: "I can't say. There is no comment on that."

Ministers' Impeachment Order Filed

Special to The Times

OTTAWA — A notice of motion calling for the impeachment of three government ministers was filed in the house of Commons today.

The notice was given by the Progressive Conservative member for Peace River, Ged Baldwin, on the trounds that Fiance Minister Edgar Benson, Justice Minister John Turner and Minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board Otto Lang have violated their oaths of office by "conspiring to withhold over $90 million from western wheat farmers."

The motion will be considered Thursday.

The motion calls for appointment of a special committee of five members to enquire into the ministers' refusal to pay money owed to Canadian wheat farmers under Temporary Wheat Reserves Act of 1966.

The failure of the government to pay the $90 million has been the subject of heated debate and many motions in the Commons since Parliament returned Sept 7 and even before adjournment for the summer last June 28.

French-Speaking Students Block Ontario School

STURGEON FALLS, Ont. (CP)—A sit-in by about 250 French-speaking students and parents continued at Sturgeon Falls secondary school as classes began today.

The demonstrators confined their sit-in Tuesday night to the school cafeteria as police had asked. But today, some students blocked the main hallway.

Sturgeon Falls police escorted teachers past the demonstrators and into the building, but some teachers gave up trying to enter and went home.

A meeting was to be held in Toronto later today between Education Minister Robert Welch, officials of the Nippissing board of education and student leader Jean St. Louis.

French-speaking students in this predominantly French-speaking community of 7,000 have been on strike since Sept. 7 to back demands for separate schools for French and English-speaking students. See earlier story on Page 39.

ALDERMAN IRATE OVER 'DANCING GIRL'

A sketch of a scantily-clad dancing girl, intended to introduce a certain note of enticing warmth into the, uh, festivities at the B.C. Municipalities Convention here, has caused only cold shoulders so far.

Ald. George McKnight, a serious-minded delegate from Port Alberni, took an indignant look at the sketch and said: "I'm not interested in seeing a dancing girl in Victoria."

The offending sketch, with accompanying message, came from the Victoria Committee responsible for entertainment of delegates to the conference.

The message: "It is not expected that the little girl on the side of this building will be at the business sessions but you may be fortunate enough to meet her at one of our social events."

That, retorted McKnight, gave the heinous impression that the convention is "nothing but a big party."

He for one wanted it known that "more serious business," and not monkey business either, faces the convention.

Victoria Ald. Ove Witt, vice-chairman of the convention committee, said the bulletin was meant to add some "light humor" to the city's reception invitations.

Anyway, he added, it only referred to one social event. He did not elaborate on which one and other delegates were discreetly silent as well.

Hostages Not Shot By Prisoners

Times News Services

ATTICA, N.Y. — State Corrections Commissioner Russell Oswald today confirmed that gunshots killed nine hostages but was not certain how it happened.

But he also confirmed no guns of any kind were found among the prisoners after troops used gunfire to halt a four-day uprising of rebellious convicts.

Gov. Nelson Rockefeller today ordered a full investigation.

Conference Postponed

The governor said he will fly to the capitol in Albany Thursday to confer with legislative leaders on the Attica situation.

In a statement to reporters late Tuesday, Oswald said one question was how any of the hostages could have been killed by gunfire.

"The most important and obvious answer is the fact that the inmates had dressed all hostages in prison garb to ensure difficulty of identification between inmate and hostage," he said.

"Additionally, hostages could very well have been used as shields or forced forward into gunfire to suggest that they were not hostages and could have been mistaken for such because of their prison garb."

He released a list of weapons found in the prison after the rebellious convicts were routed. The list included gasoline bombs, sharpened spears, metal pipes, straight razors and spiked baseball bats—but no guns.

He declined to answer questions from reporters.

No Throats Cut

The commissioner's statement came several hours after disclosure by Dr. John F. Edland, Monroe County medical examiner, that the hostages all died of gunshot wounds and that none had had his throat slashed.

"There were no cut throats or any kind of mutilation," Dr. Edland said after examining eight bodies of hostages. "All eight cases died of gunshot wounds."

Oswald maintained that "there have been two misstatements of facts" concerning what happened to the hostages. He said the first was that all the hostages had cut throats and the second was that none had a slashed throat.

During the evacuation of the dead and wounded after the assault, Oswald said, "a number of those evacuated had slashed throats. . . ."

He offered no further elaboration and did not mention any source of information other than the report of the forensic pathologist, a reference to Dr. Edland.

Heat of Situation

Oswald said one reason for the erroneous reports about throats being slit was that several corrections officers "positively stated that they had seen hostages dropping as their throats were apparently being cut."

He added that there was confusion when 30 other hostages were evacuated and that those involved reported in the heat of the situation things that might have been erroneous.

CURTIS BLASTS VICTORIA ALDERMEN

'Mercenary Attitude' Attacked

Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich today attacked what he called "a mercenary attitude" on the part of Victoria aldermen who Tuesday opposed turning Thetis Lake Park into a permanent natural playground.

Members of city council's B committee stated they want to preserve their options, which include selling the park to the regional government and subdividing the 40 acres that lie south of the Island highway.

Speaking as chairman of the capital district regional board, Curtis said: "If this is interpreted as interference into the affairs of Victoria, then I'm sorry."

"But the point has to be made that the Greater Victoria area needs more parkland, not less, and it seems an unfortunate contradiction, at a time when the regional district, Saanich and other municipalities are buying parkland and open space that the city even gives the slightest consideration of reducing its park acreage at Thetis," Curtis said.

"I'm saddened by the apparent mercenary attitude in the city. Parkland does not belong on a balance sheet. It is an asset that should not be preceded by a dollar sign."

Curtis pointed out that the regional district has acquired almost 3,000 acres of parkland in the past five years.
